Summary

The purpose of this analysis is to update and expand the scope of the previous analysis conducted in October 2020.

We will see that:

- Notwithstanding the efforts from the Belgian Gaming Commission, illegal websites remain accessible to Belgian players. From the 1083 websites investigated, we were still able to play on 227 of them (more illegal accessible websites than legal operators).
- Other actors need to be involved in the battle against illegal operators (telecom, financial institutions, ...) if we want it to be efficient.
- The advertising ban might have a negative impact on player protection.
- The National Lottery has multiple privileges in comparison with the private sector. Not all privileges seem to be beneficial for player protection.
- A Level Playing Field needs to be implemented:
  - With illegal operators, on a tax level
  - With legal operators, between the public and the private sector
- There is a strong need for independent, scientific research that considers the specificities from the Belgian legal framework.
- There is a need for an open discussion between all stakeholders and parties and a need for more knowledge about the sector.

1. Introduction

“I’m under the impression that the size of the illegal sector is exaggerated to avoid regulation.”<sup>1</sup>

Jannie Haek

Contrary to the above statement made by the CEO of the National Lottery, we have noticed that, in recent years, there has been a significant increase in the number of illegal gambling sites accessible to a Belgian player. These websites pose a threat not only to the protection of players, but also to the survival of the legal sector. Indeed, illegal operators have no regard for the strict rules imposed on legal operators, which reduces player protection and allows them to compete directly with the legal sector through more aggressive advertising.

In our study, we aim to shed light on the extent of this problem by doing a comprehensive analysis of more than 1000 illegal gambling sites. Our research will not only show that Belgian players can easily register, deposit, and play on these websites, but will also demonstrate that the number of illegal gambling sites is not an exaggeration but rather a troubling reality for the legal sector.

In October 2020, a study was published on the illegal online gambling market in Belgium. The objective of the present study is to update and expand the scope of the previous study by (re)analysing over 1000 websites (adding 500 websites to the websites analysed previously). This research was carried out from January 2023 through April 2023 and the same methodology as in October 2020 was used.

After discussing our results, we briefly touch on additional topics (such as taxation, illegal practices, where Belgian banks and ISPs stand against illegal gambling sites, the recent advertising ban and the position of the National Lottery) to highlight that not only illegal gambling sites but also other factors can pose difficulties for the legal sector and further amplify the threat that is the illegal sector.

With this research, we hope to raise awareness about the dangers of illegal gambling sites and urge the Belgian authorities to address this growing problem so players can be channelled towards a legal offer that guarantees the interests of players. This isn’t something that should be taken lightly nor is it an invention of the legal sector to avoid regulation, it is a real issue and it is time it is taken seriously if the government is still serious about their channelling players policy.

2. General information

2.1 Belgian licensing system

2.1.1 The Gambling Act of 7 May 1999<sup>2</sup>

1. Betting and gaming are strictly regulated in Belgium by a licensing system. These licences are given out by the Belgian Gaming Commission (BGC). The number of retail licences is limited per type of establishment. The online licences are dependent on the retail licences and are therefore also limited in number. To obtain and maintain a website operators need to adhere to the main legal framework and meet several requirements concerning player protection.

2. Aside from giving out licences to legal operators, the BGC also enforces the rules upon these licenced operators. Non-compliance with the legal framework or the player protection measure can lead to administrative (fines, suspension, or withdrawal of licence) or criminal (fine or prison sentence) sanctions.

2.1.2 The National Lottery

3. The games (lotteries and scratch cards) offered by the National Lottery reside under their state monopoly. These games do not fall under the Gambling Act of 1999 and are therefore not subjected to the strict rules imposed by this law or control by the BGC. The legal framework for these games consists of the Act of 19 April 2002 on the National Lottery<sup>3</sup>, the royal decrees executing this law designed for the National Lottery and the management contract<sup>4</sup>.

As for the betting offer of by the National Lottery (operated by their subsidiary: “Scoore”), they are subject to the Gambling Act of 1999.

2.2 What is an illegal website?

4. In the context of this study, an illegal website is a website that offers betting and games of chance to customers on Belgian soil without a licence given by the BGC. Since they do not have a Belgian licence, they do not apply the Belgian legal framework nor do they meet the specific player protection requirements (EPIS, deposit limits, no credit card acceptance, ...).

5. These websites aren’t regulated by the BGC and are often operated in tax havens where Belgian law isn’t recognised. In the current situation, the Belgian regulator or authorities have little to no control over them to be able to stop them offering their services to Belgian residents.

3. Analysis

3.1 Collection of data

In our study we analysed 1083 Illegal Sites, 500 of which were also included in the previous study.

6. Similar to the previous version of the study conducted in October 2020, it is important to have a large amount of data to analyse the accessibility of players to gambling sites that are not licensed by the Belgian Gaming Commission, which are - by definition - illegal (hereafter "Illegal Sites"). In addition, some of the Illegal Sites included in this study are also on the blacklist of the Gaming Commission<sup>5</sup>, hereafter "Blacklisted Sites". Access to these Blacklisted Sites should, in principle, be impossible.

7. In order to ensure the comparison of the results with the results in October 2020, an identical methodology was applied. As a reminder, the methodology used was the following:

- A search via search engines, mainly Google, using keywords such as "casino", "sports betting", "casino bonus" or "sports bonus" (non-exhaustive list);

- Use of promotional material on social networks: a search via social network search engines using the above-mentioned keywords;
- By following links from one Illegal Site to another Illegal Site. We have found several related sites (casino or sports betting) where the casino page links to the sports betting page and vice versa. Another example is a set of websites, all belonging to the same group, that link to each other or require an account on one website to be able to connect to the other.
- By using websites that list all gambling sites available to Belgian players. One example is the website www.casinoslists.com. This website lists more than 600 casino websites that are available to Belgian players. Please note: this website does not indicate anywhere that the websites are illegal in Belgium. A study by H2 capital mentions more than 2.000 illegal websites possibly accepting Belgian players.<sup>6</sup>

The screenshot displays the homepage of the Casinolist website, which is a platform for finding online casinos. The header features the 'CASINOLISTS' logo, a search bar with the placeholder 'Search your favorite casino or game', and a 'Global' button with a globe icon. Below the header is a navigation menu with links: NO DEPOSIT CASINOS, NEW CASINOS, LIVE, CASINOS, SOFTWARE, COUNTRIES, BANKING, GAMES, and BLOG.

The main content area is titled 'Online Casinos for Players in Belgium'. It includes a welcome message: 'Welcome to Casinolist's page where you will find the best Belgium online casinos. You can see all the best casino sites and use the filters to modify the list according to your preferences. You can see new Belgian online casinos, the most top-rated casinos, those that offer a certain currency or even those that have free bonuses.'

Below this is a section titled 'Best Belgium Online Casinos' featuring four casino cards:

- GoldenBet Casino: Rated '8 Very good', accepts EUR and French, offers a '100% First Deposit Bonus'.
- Montecryptos Casino: Rated '8 Very good', accepts EUR and French, offers a '130% + 20 FS First Deposit Bonus'.
- Fair Go Casino: Rated '8 Very good', offers a '5 AU$ No Deposit Bonus' and a '100% First Deposit Bonus'.
- RockNRolla Casino: Rated '8 Very good', offers a '100% + 15 FS First Deposit Bonus'.

Each card has a 'VISIT CASINO' button. Below the cards is a section titled 'All Belgium Online Casinos' with filter and sort options.

<sup>6</sup> "While the Belgian Commission continues to be proactive in its efforts to combat offshore play, it is clear that a sizeable illegal market still exists. In 2020, we noted that over 800 sites were accepting players from Belgium. In 2023 our search is showing over 2,000 sites offering play in multiple languages and currencies (980 if just in Euros).", H2 Ardent / Gaming1 – Belgium Betting & Gaming Market, Regulatory Impact Assessment 2023

3.2 Data analysis

8. For each Illegal Site, we created a file containing screenshots of each step taken (see Annex I – Example of individual form). We asked the following questions while visiting each Illegal Site:

- ☐ Has the website been blacklisted by the Gaming Commission?
- ☐ Does the website operator claim to have a license?
- ☐ Does the website operator disclose a license number?
- ☐ Which authority monitors the website's operations?
- ☐ In which country is the website operator based?
- ☐ Are there (prohibited) advertisements on the website or through referring links?
- ☐ Does the website offer (prohibited) bonuses?
- ☐ What is the minimum age required to play on the website?
- ☐ Is it possible to open an account on the website?
- ☐ Is it possible to deposit (with a credit card) on the website?
- ☐ Is it possible to play (after deposit) on the website?

In analysing the data collected, we used the same twelve criteria as in the previous version of the study.

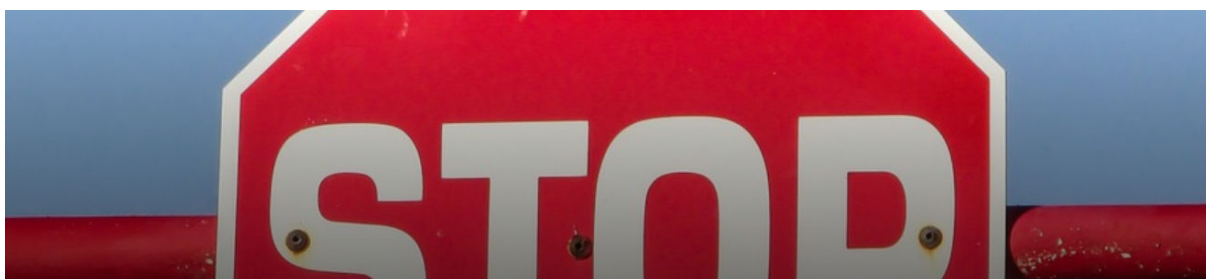

9. Out of 1083 Illegal Sites analysed, 893 (or 82,5%) are accessible to a Belgian player. As for the 190 Illegal Sites that were not accessible to a Belgian player (for example, if an error message was displayed or if we were directed to a "STOP" page), it was checked whether these Illegal Sites were on the blacklist of the Gaming Commission. For every other criterion, these Sites were marked "N/A", as it was not possible to obtain more information. Even though these Sites were not accessible, they were included in this analysis for transparency purposes.

10. In the following, we will delve into each of these criteria by first discussing the methodology used and then examining the results to highlight the current situation and where there is room for improvement.

3.3 The “blacklist” of the Gaming Commission

3.3.1 Methodology

11. Since 2012, the Gaming Commission (BGC) has maintained a blacklist, published on its website<sup>7</sup>. The last update (before the publication of the present study) of this list was on October 19th 2023. At the time of the analyses, 428 websites were published on the blacklist.

12. For all the Illegal Sites mentioned in this study, it was checked whether they were on this blacklist to determine whether it was an Illegal Site (non-Blacklisted) or a Blacklisted Site. It was noted that some Blacklisted Sites have tried to bypass the ban by slightly changing their URL or domain name. Some examples: the Blacklisted Site www.casinoestrella.com has become www.casinoestrella2020.com and still offers the same content, www.cherrygoldcasino.com has become www.cherrygoldcasinonew.com, www.evobet.com has become www.evo-bet.com, etc.

The purpose of this list is to inform and protect players. Therefore, the names of illegal gambling sites that are no longer accessible are removed from the list after a period of at least five years from the date of listing.

3.3.2 Results

13. The purpose of blacklisting an Illegal Site is to prevent Belgian players from having access to it. Nevertheless, our analysis shows that, of the 1083 Illegal Sites analysed, 299 are on the blacklist of which 204 remain accessible to Belgian players.

47,7%

At least 47,7% of the 428 Blacklisted Sites remain accessible to Belgian players.

14. This implies that at least 47,7% of the 428 Blacklisted Sites (Illegal Sites on the blacklist at the time of this study) are still accessible to Belgian players.

The 299 Blacklisted Sites included in our research represent 27,6% of the total of 1083 Illegal Sites analysed.

Note that accessibility to the Blacklisted Sites may vary depending on the browser used.

3.4 Regulators

3.4.1 Methodology

15. Every legal operator in Belgium must hold a licence, granted by the Gaming Commission, to ensure adherence to appropriate standards, compliance with Belgian laws as well as ensure player protection (fair, fraud-free and non-incentive play). Illegal Sites are, by definition, not license holders.

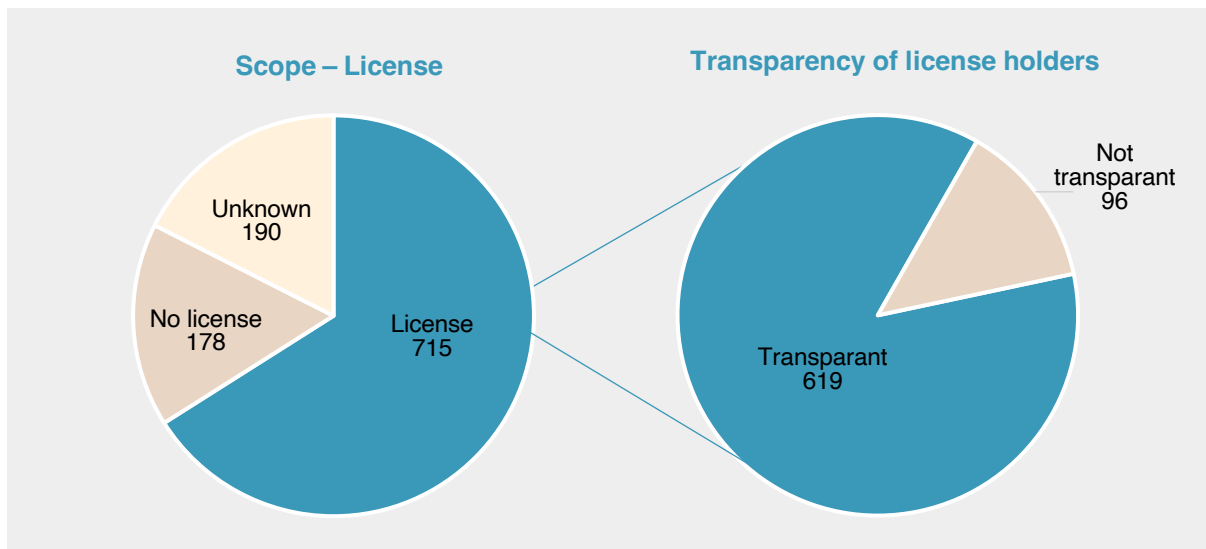

16. When visiting each Illegal Site, we checked whether the Site indicates having a license and whether they mention a license number and regulator. In other words, we checked whether the Illegal Site was transparent.

The most recurring regulators in this study are Curaçao, Malta Gaming Authority, United Kingdom Gambling Commission, Gibraltar Gambling Commissioner and Alderney Gambling Control Commission.

3.4.2 Results

17. Out of 1083 Illegal Sites analysed, 715 mention being licensed (66%). Of these 715 Sites, 619 (or 57,2% of 1083 Sites analysed) are transparent and indicate the license number and regulatory authority on their Site.

18. Of the Illegal Sites who are licensed and mention their regulator (619), a majority of the licenses are issued by two regulators: Curaçao e-Gaming (387 Illegal Sites, or 35,7% of the total) and Malta Gaming Authority (190 Illegal Sites, or 17,5% of the total). 409 Illegal Sites, or 37,8%, do not mention their regulator (see Annex III – Regulators).

3.5 Base country

3.5.1 Methodology

19. The country in which the operator of the Illegal Site is based is included in this study to give a clearer view of an obvious issue: the country in which the operators of Illegal Sites are taxed. Bearing in mind that taxation is one of the factors to be considered by an operator, it is a major point on which various countries are fighting over. The fact of being subject to a higher or lower tax rate is therefore taken into account by an operator in the choice of his place of establishment.

Countries that wish to attract gambling operators will implement low tax regimes for these activities, which may explain, in part, why Curaçao and Malta are 'popular' countries for online gambling operators.

3.5.2 Results

20. There seems to be a strong correlation between the country in which the licence is granted and the country in which the operator of the Illegal Site is based. As was the case for the regulators, the operators of Illegal Sites are often located in Curaçao (37,2% of the total, or 403 Illegal Sites) and Malta (19,1%, or 207 Illegal Sites) (see Annex IV – Base country).

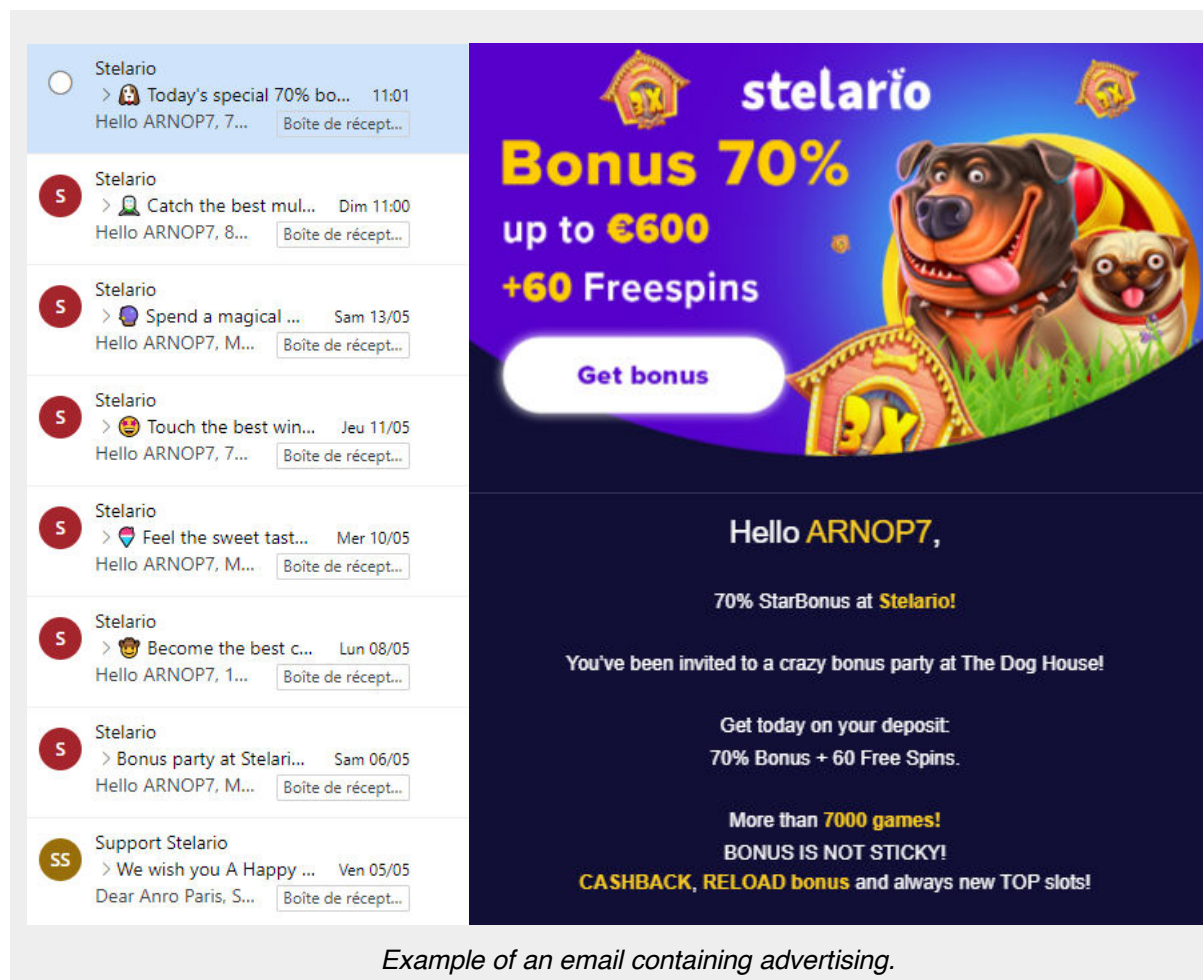

21. There seems to be a significant discrepancy in relation to Illegal Sites that do not mention where they are based. In the analysis, it was noted that Illegal Sites preferred to mark the country in which they are based rather than the licence under which they were operating (assuming they had one).

3.6 Advertisements

3.6.1 Methodology

22. In preparing the previous report, we noticed that a huge amount of marketing materials were being received on a regular basis. These marketing communications consist mostly of advertising emails or regular emails (e.g. registration or password reset emails) that also contain advertising. In addition, we also received SMS, WhatsApp messages and phone calls.

Example of an email containing advertising.

23. We have included these materials in our analysis to demonstrate that it is common practice. In each case, we checked whether or not this advertising complied with the requirements of the Royal Decree of 25 October 2018 on the conditions for operating games of chance and gambling via computers<sup>8</sup>.

We defined illegal advertising as follows: when Illegal Sites sent communications with offers encouraging their customers to deposit money and inviting them to play on their Site, as well as when other advertisements were found on other websites (e.g. referral links).

<sup>8</sup> Royal Decree of 25 October 2018 on the conditions for operating games of chance and gambling via computers, M.B. 31 October 2018.

3.6.2 Results

82,2%

82,2% of all the Illegal Sites analysed offer illegal advertisements.

24. A total of 890 (82,2%) out of 1083 Illegal Sites who are offering advertisements do not meet the requirements of the Royal Decree of 25 October 2018.

25. Of the 890 Illegal Sites that do not comply with Belgian regulations, 203 (or 22,8%) are Blacklisted Sites. This represents 18,7% of the total number of Illegal Sites analysed (1083), 47,4% of the Illegal Sites blacklisted by the Gaming Commission (428) and 67,8% of the Blacklisted Sites analysed (299).

3.7 Bonus offers

3.7.1 Methodology

26. We checked whether the Illegal Site offered bonuses in some form or another (on their own website, in advertisements or via other communications such as registration emails or SMS). As a reminder, bonuses are prohibited in Belgium.<sup>9</sup>

3.7.2 Results

82,1%

82,1% of all the Illegal Sites analysed offer illegal bonuses.

27. 889 Illegal Sites (82,1% of the 1083 Sites analysed) offer (prohibited) bonuses to players and are therefore in violation of the Royal Decree of 25 October 2018.

28. 22,9% (204) of these 889 Illegal Sites are Blacklisted Sites. Meaning 100% of the Blacklisted Sites analysed, that are accessible to Belgian players (204), offer bonuses to their players.

3.8 Age verification – identification process

3.8.1 Methodology

29. When creating a player account with false identity details, we checked whether there were any security measures in place to prevent people under the legal age from registering on the Site. As a reminder, an account can often be created using false identity details; verification of age limits can easily be bypassed.

<sup>9</sup> Royal Decree of 25 October 2018 on the conditions for operating games of chance and gambling via computers, BOG. 31 October 2018.
https://www.ejustice.just.fgov.be/cgi/article\_body.pl?language=fr&caller=summary&pub\_date=18-10-31&numac=2018014587

In Belgium, players under the age of 18 are not allowed to play casino games, games in gaming halls and sports betting. Players under the age of 21 cannot participate in casino games and gaming rooms but can in sports betting.

3.8.2 Results

30. It is during the player registration that the identification process takes place. Of the 893 accessible Illegal Sites analysed, 15 had an offer focused exclusively on sports betting. The minimum age to participate in sports betting is 18 years or older. All 15 Illegal Sites offering only sports betting, require the player to be 18 years of age.

31. The remaining 878 Illegal Sites offer casino games or a mix of casino games and sports betting. The required age to play casino games is 21 years old. However, the majority of Illegal Sites do not require the player to be 21 in order to participate in casino games. Only 5,2% (or 46 Illegal Sites) require the player to be 21 years of age.

32. On 829 Illegal Sites, the minimum age is only 18. This represents 76,5% of the 1083 Illegal Sites analysed and 94,4% of the Illegal Sites offering casino games (878). In three cases (0,3% of the Illegal Sites offering casino games), it is required to be 19 years old to play casino games.

3.9 Ability to open a player account

3.9.1 Methodology

33. For each Illegal Site, we checked whether it was possible to create a player account using false identity details. First, we tried to open a player account using a normal browser like Google Chrome, Safari, Firefox, etc. If this was not possible, another attempt was made using an anonymised browser (TOR) or a browser plug-in (Hola VPN).

All player accounts have been created with a false identity in order to demonstrate the ease with which a Belgian player can access the Illegal Sites without having to go through a real identification system.

34. These methods were chosen to demonstrate how easily an average Belgian player could register on Illegal Sites, as most Belgian players have access to normal browsers (in normal and anonymous mode). TOR and Hola VPN were chosen because they are easy to install and use and they are also free. These methods do not require any advanced computer skills to be used to their fullest.

Hola allows players to access worldwide content.

35. The Illegal Sites, included in the previous study, where we had already opened a player account were checked again using a new account to see whether they were still accessible and still using the same methods.

3.9.2 Results

36. Out of 893 accessible Illegal Sites, a Belgian player can create a player account on 714 Illegal Sites (65,9% of 1083 Sites analysed). 48,2% of the accounts were opened with a normal browser, 51,8% were opened with the TOR browser or the Hola VPN plug-in.

37. On 170 of the 204 accessible Blacklisted Sites, or 83,3%, it is possible to create a player account. This means that at least on 39,7% of the 428 Blacklisted Sites, it is possible for a Belgian player to create a player account.

3.10 Ability to deposit – acceptance of credit cards

3.10.1 Methodology

38. On every Illegal Site on which we were able to create an account, we tried to deposit money on it. We used a prepaid Mastercard (the same card we used in the previous study) for this purpose, so we could simultaneously check whether the Illegal Site accepted deposits via credit card.

In Belgium, credit card deposits on gambling Sites are strictly prohibited.

3.10.2 Results

39. Out of 893 accessible Illegal Sites, credit cards are accepted on 795 Sites (73,4% of 1083 Sites analysed). They are also accepted on 186 of the 204 accessible Blacklisted Sites analysed (91,1%).

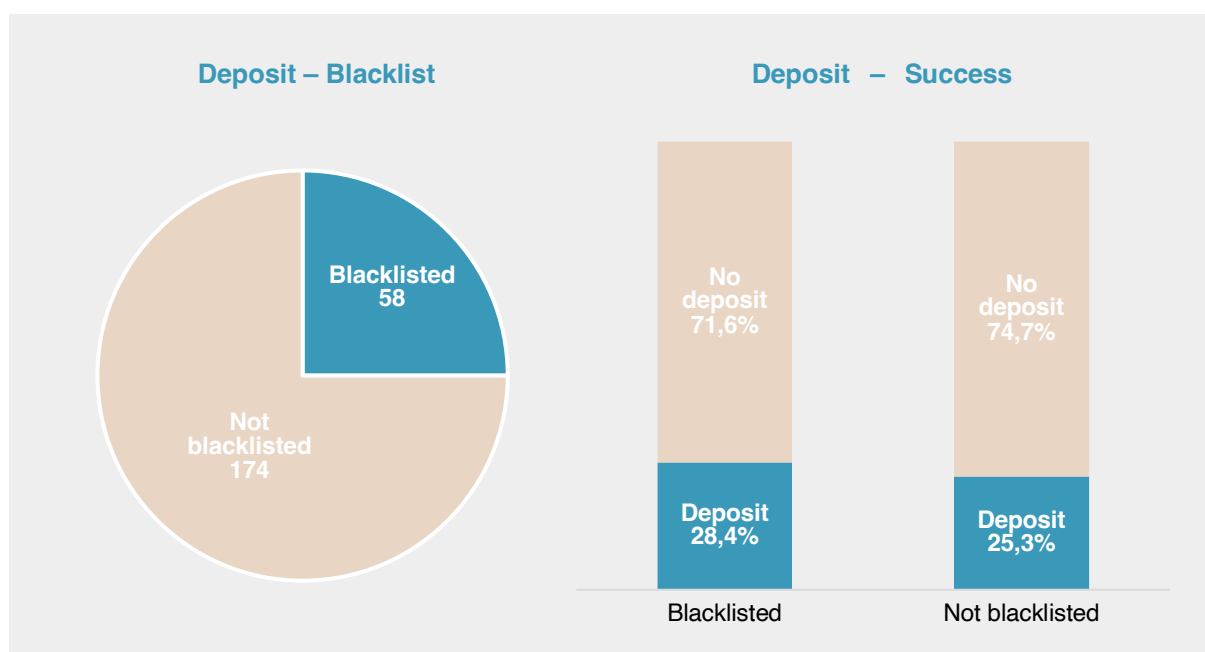

40. It should be noted that for this analysis we did not use the full range of payment methods available to a Belgian player. Many Illegal Sites also offer the option to pay via Neosurf, Paysafe, PayPal, etc. Some Illegal Sites also accept cryptocurrency as payment.

41. Out of 893 accessible Illegal Sites, we were able to successfully deposit real money on 232 Sites (21,4% of 1083 Sites analysed). This amounts to a success rate of 32,5% of the Illegal Sites on which we were able to create an account (714).

42. Of the 232 Illegal Sites on which we successfully deposited, 58 are Blacklisted Sites. This amounts to a success rate of 28,4% for accessible Blacklisted Sites (204) and 25,3% for non-Blacklisted Sites (689).

43. In practice, the number of Illegal Sites where it is possible to deposit will undoubtedly be higher, since not only did we not use all available payment methods, but we also exclusively used a fake identity. Some Illegal Sites advertise that they accept Belgian players but require an identity check before a deposit is possible. This is a limiting factor in the analysis as we were not able to verify our (fake) identity. In reality, a real Belgian player could provide documents to verify their identity and could therefore deposit.

3.11 Ability to play

3.11.1 Methodology

44. The last point of the analysis is to verify the possibility to play on the Illegal Site, using real funds deposited in the player account. Additionally, we only counted playing if we could also win real money. After all, some Illegal Sites offered the option to buy virtual coins and play with them, but no real money or prizes could be won.

Only playing with real deposited money was taken into account, despite some Sites offering the ability to play with fake money ("play for fun") or with bonuses offered to a player upon registration (e.g. free spins).

On this website, players can buy coins to play but cannot win real money or prizes.

3.11.2 Results

45. We were able to play on 227 out of 893 accessible Illegal Sites analysed (20,9% of 1083 Sites analysed). This means we were able to play on 97,8% of the Illegal Sites on which we were able to deposit (227 out of 232). In 5 instances, a deposit was possible, but we did not manage to play.

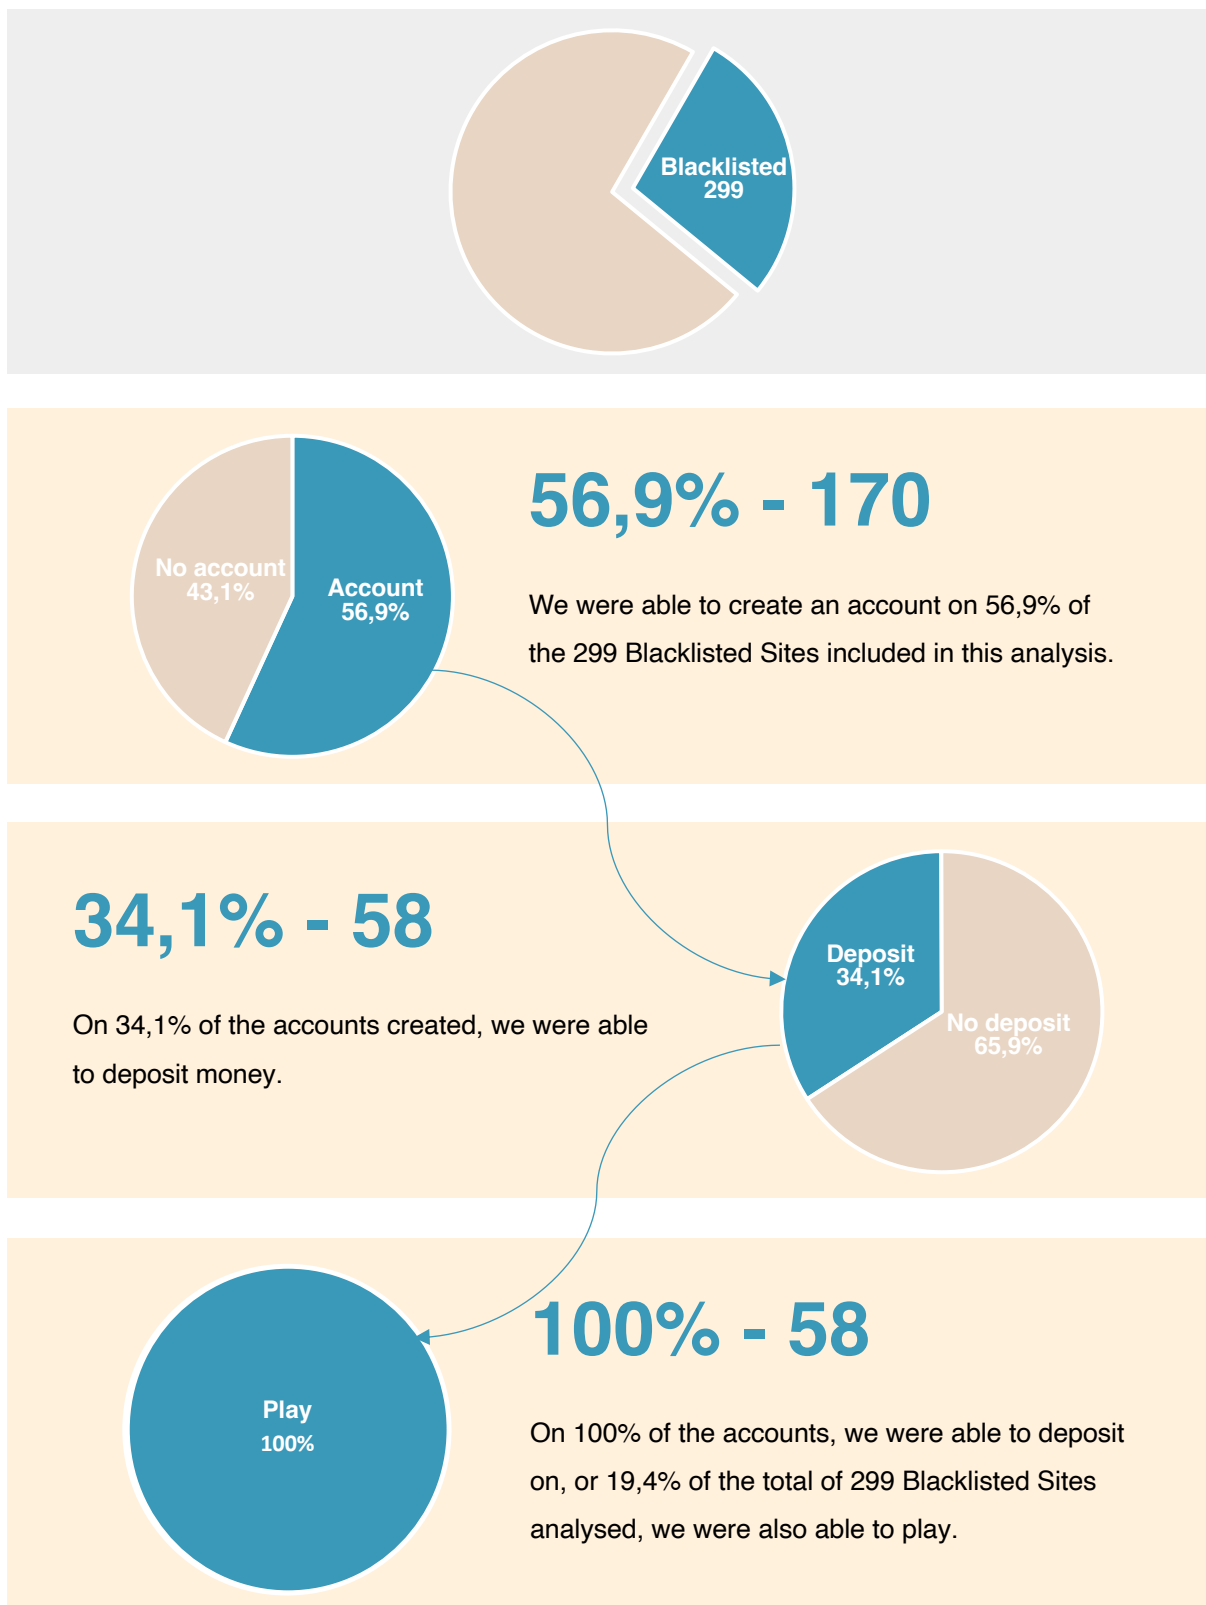

46. Of these 227 Illegal Sites, 58 are blacklisted by the Gaming Commission. This corresponds to 13,5% of the Sites blacklisted by the Gaming Commission (428 at the time of this study).

3.12 In summary

3.12.1 Blacklisted Sites

3.12.2 Non-Blacklisted Sites

3.12.3 All Illegal Sites

65,9% - 714

We were able to create an account on 65,9% of the 1083 Illegal Sites included in this analysis.

32,5% - 232

On 32,5% of the accounts we created, we were able to deposit money.

97,8% - 227

On 97,8% of the accounts we were able to deposit on, or 21% of the total of 1083 Illegal Sites, we were also able to play.

4. Gaming Commission: blacklisting procedure

4.1 Blacklisting an Illegal Site

47. Encounters with illegal gambling on the internet is prevalent. A quick Google search using relevant keywords (e.g. “casino bonus”) leads to an endless list of Illegal Sites to choose from. Despite efforts to blacklist these Illegal Sites, some still remain accessible to Belgian players and new Illegal Sites keep popping up. On top of that, blacklisting an Illegal Site is by no means a simple process, in fact, the Gaming Commission has to go through multiple channels to make this happen:

DISCOVERY	The Gaming Commission discovers an Illegal Site.
INVESTIGATION	An employee of the Gaming Commission with the status of judicial police officer conducts an investigation.
DEMAND TO REGULATE	Officer writes to the illegal online operator and asks them to make their illegal website inaccessible to the Belgian market.
PUBLIC PROSECUTION	If there is no response from the illegal operator, the findings of the officer are submitted to the public prosecutors’ office. The website will be blacklisted by the Committee and the BIPT will be informed. An answer from the prosecutor is given within 6 months
OFFICIAL GAZZETTE	When it is decided to blacklist an Illegal Site, the Belgian Official Gazette is notified of the websites to be added to the blacklist.
PUBLICATION	The list of illegal websites is published in the Belgian Official Gazette and on the website of the Gaming Commission
SANCTION PROCEDURE	If the public prosecutor doesn't pursue criminal proceedings a sanctions procedure is initiated. This can take some time as hearings are involved.
DECISION	A decision is made in the sanctions procedure

48. Clearly, blacklisting and sanctioning an Illegal Site is a complex and time-consuming process. Besides, blacklisting an Illegal Site is no guarantee that players will no longer have access to them. There is, however, no clear indication as to why these Sites remain accessible when they were blocked. Despite its many challenges, the Gaming Commission seems committed to protecting both the players and the legal sector, as can be clearly seen in the rise in number of Blacklisted Sites.

49. Compared to the previous analysis, it is noticeable that the Gaming Commission is blacklisting more Illegal Sites than ever. From 2012 until the previous analysis (October 2020), the Gaming Commission had blacklisted 180 Illegal Sites. At the time of the present analysis, this number has increased to 455 Blacklisted Sites, meaning the number of Blacklisted Sites has more than doubled in 3 years' time.

4.2 Difficulty combatting Illegal Sites

50. More power needs to be given to the BGC and regulators need to work together. For example, a court case was brought in Belgium – by a legal operator – against an illegal operator. This operator was already on the blacklist of the Gaming Commission but was still accessible. The judge decided that the website was indeed operating illegally in Belgium and ruled that the website needed to block the access from Belgium under their domain name and any other linked domain names under penalty of 50.000 € per day with a maximum of 5 million euros. This judgment got notified but the operator paid no attention to the notification because the Belgian judgement isn't recognized under their laws. Please note that they were already notified several times before of their illegal operations and specifically when they were put on the blacklist by the Gaming Commission several years before. The access to their website (deposit and play) was still not blocked more than 100 days after the notification. Court proceedings in their jurisdiction are currently ongoing.

51. With such little regards towards the regulations of different countries in which they are operating, they constitute a threat for Belgian citizens, who don't always know the difference between a legal or an illegal website.<sup>10</sup>

<sup>10</sup> In the top 10 most-known websites, 4 out of 10 websites are illegal websites: <https://www.gamingcommission.be/nl/bevraging-ipsos-jongeren-en-kansspelenweddenschappen>.

52. In 2013 the European Parliament already asked, in its resolution of 10 September 2013 on online gambling<sup>11</sup>, the Commission to study what can be done to stop the practice whereby companies based in one Member State market online-gambling services — for example via satellite-TV or advertisement campaigns — in another Member State in which they are not licensed to offer such services. The European Parliament is seemingly well aware of the difficulty of combatting illegal websites within the European Union.

53. Whilst we see an evolution and collaboration protocols being put in to place between the different European regulators, and we applaud this positive evolution, this does not cover the operators situated outside of Europe, such as operators based in Curaçao.

5. Dishonest practices by illegal operators

Illegal operators have many commercial tactics, with no regard for consumer protection, let alone player protection. These dishonest practices take different forms and are a threat to player protection.

5.1 Pretending to be a legal operator

54. As mentioned in the previous studies, illegal operators will use the protected trademarks of the legal operators on applications on the Apple App Store or the Google Play Store to get downloads of their applications which will lead to an illegal website instead of the legal operator's website.

55. In the example below, we can see that an application called “Ladbrokes: Tips Sports Betting” pretends to be an official app for Ladbrokes. In the description, it is noted that the application serves as a guide for the Ladbrokes mobile app. Upon opening the app, the website 1xBet is opened, a blacklisted website on which it is possible to create an account, deposit and play.

Players are greeted with an advertisement for 1xBet.com, blacklisted by the BGC in 2017.

Using a VPN, it is entirely possible to create an account, deposit and play on this Blacklisted Site.

5.2 Social media advertisements

56. Advertisements for gambling are often not allowed on social media platforms, at least not without being duly licenced. This is one of the reasons why illegal operators disguise their products as game applications, available on the Google Play Store or on the Apple App Store and advertise those on several social media platforms such as Facebook and Instagram.

Illegal operators target Belgium specifically by using the Belgian flag and using logos of Belgian banks.

They also actively try to make it seem as if a player can easily win money by playing a simple game.

57. Once you download the game, blinded by the enormous amounts of money you can win, and open the application, you will be redirected to the registration page or home page of the illegal operator.

“Drop Flinko” and “Wather Mod”, both based on the game Plinko (a casino game based on an American game show or on the “Pachinko” game) are just a few examples.

58. It takes a while before these apps are reported and removed from the Stores but once removed another one will soon pop up, as will the advertisements. Both Stores easily remove applications from the legal operators and their pages or advertisements are quickly blocked by social media. It makes you wonder why these illegal operators keep slipping through the maze by simply not identifying themselves as a gambling operator.

6. Illegal websites are a threat to player protection.

59. In this international study, the operators in question do not have to comply with the Belgian regulations. This shows that these illegal operators are indeed a threat for Belgian players because they do not seem to care whether their revenue comes from addicted players or whether they are illegal. By doing so, and not combatting the illegal sector in an effective way, the legal sector is weakened and a drop in channelisation rate can be expected.<sup>12</sup>

60. We are of the opinion that the grasp of the illegal sector on the Belgian market is severely underestimated, as shown by the comment of the CEO of the National Lottery, and we believe that this study shows that they are very present on the Belgian market, which represents a threat towards the players and a dangerous situation for vulnerable persons such as those combatting gambling addiction, which has also been confirmed by the Gaming Commission<sup>13</sup>.

61. The National Lottery as a company confirmed this same problem in its annual reports since 2016<sup>14</sup> and mentions it being one of the threats and risks with which the National Lottery itself is confronted whilst trying to fulfil her social mission:

“As a “socially responsible and professional provider of gaming pleasure”, the National Lottery has two essential missions:

- the protection of consumers and, in particular, minors, including through targeted channeling of gaming behaviour and ongoing efforts on the prevention and treatment of gambling addiction;
- the financial support of socially valuable organisations and initiatives.

However, the company is concerned about several developments that could negatively affect the fulfilment - let alone intensification - of its social mission in the future:

- the increase in the supply of betting and gaming with limited framing;
- the continued emergence of an illegal offer that is difficult to control;
- the questioning, at European level, of the usefulness of a monopoly for lottery games;
- the greater investment capacity of its competitors”<sup>15</sup>

62. The problem of the illegal websites competing with the legal operators (including the National Lottery) is mentioned as a possible justification should the National Lottery not be able to complete or ramp up their social mission. If the above is true for the National Lottery, it is even more true for private operators which cannot profit from a monopoly and have been submitted to strict regulations over the past few years. To us, it seems clear that these illegal operators are a threat to the channelisation to which both private operators as the public operator contribute.

63. These illegal websites are an even bigger risk for excluded players in the EPIS-system. A recent study done by the BGC showed that 30% of the excluded players keep on gambling after their exclusion. Since they are excluded from legal operators, they turn towards the National Lottery (25%) or towards illegal websites (30%).<sup>16</sup>

7. Protection requires collaboration from different partners

64. Currently, when a website is blacklisted by the BGC, after having gone through the entire time-consuming process, a request is sent out to the Internet Service Providers (ISPs) to block the domain name on which the illegal website is operating. Please note that it is likely that the illegal site, upon discovering it was blacklisted or being investigated, either already closed the website or moved it to another domain name, rendering the blacklisting request practically useless.

65. For an efficient blocking of the illegal websites the collaboration from different partners is required. The Gaming Commission already organised a round table with different partners to reinforce the battle against illegal operators:

“In addition to these new challenges, illegal gambling sites are also a major problem. These sites try to entice players with a rich offer of games of chance and, in doing so, disregard any rules or measures in place to protect players. On the contrary, problem players are particularly vulnerable to this illegal sector.

This situation is well-known and unanimously condemned, but unequivocal solutions to the problem are not obvious and are often ineffective.

Magali Clavie, the president of the BGC, believes that these illegal websites are a real plague on several levels and can only be tackled by combining the right expertise and the commitment of all parties involved.”<sup>17</sup>

66. In our opinion, apart from including the legal sector, the political world, policy makers and addiction experts in these discussions, practical measures need to be implemented by Internet Service Providers (LAN, Wi-Fi and mobile internet), the GAFAM and the financial institutions.

7.1 Blocking the domain name alone isn't sufficient.

67. From this study it seems clear this domain name blocking measure on its own is not sufficient to prevent illegal websites from offering their games to Belgian residents. The illegal operator simply changes its domain name slightly (e.g. eatsleepbet.com to eat-sleep-bet.com) to become accessible again.

68. IP-blocking alone would not be sufficient either since IP's often are dynamic, the traffic flows through different datacentres and illegal operators will quickly change their IP. A combination of both is recommended, together with any other efficient tools that block traffic from a specific website (domain) and IP.

69. On top of these measures, (preventive intervention) from other partners is required: the financial institutions through which the money flows and the different (social media) platforms on which these illegal sites make themselves known to Belgian players.

7.2 Blocking the use of the API or transaction to and from illegal websites

70. While Belgian banks are blocking legal operators from opening or maintaining a bank account with their institution, it seems they do not have an issue with accepting payments, through their APIs, from illegal operators.

71. If Belgian legal operators are getting blocked, we do not understand how payments to those illegal operators or the implementation of their API – through a payment solutions provider or not – can continue. Blocking the money-flow is one of the few actions that will be efficient against illegal operators.

72. During the course of this study, when we tried to pay with our prepaid Mastercard, we were confronted with the logo of our bank and the process where we needed to approve the payment through the mobile application of the Belgian bank. This gives the impression to the customer that the website is legal in Belgium since a Belgian bank would not accept payments to and from a website that is deemed illegal (and for which it is a criminal offence to play on them).

74. While we understand the Belgian banks don't always have a clear view over the websites on which their APIs are implemented, there must be some technical way to get a list of the websites on which the APIs are used and contact their partners to make sure payments located in Belgium can't get through to those illegal sites.

75. The European Parliament suggested this idea in a resolution of 2011, when the problem was less present as it is now:

“17. Stresses that more action should be taken by Member States to prevent illegal gambling providers from offering their services online, for example by blacklisting illegal gambling providers; calls on the Commission to examine the possibility of proposing a legally binding instruments obliging banks, credit card issuers and other payment system participants in the EU to block, on the basis of national black lists, transactions between their clients and gambling providers that are not licensed in their jurisdiction, without hindering legitimate transactions.”<sup>18</sup>

76. The European parliament repeated this recommendation in 2013:

“19. Recommends the introduction of uniform, pan-European common security standards for electronic identification and cross border e-verification services; welcomes the Commission's proposal for a directive on e-identification and authentication, which will allow for interoperability of national e-identification schemes where these exist; calls, therefore, for registration and identification procedures to be streamlined and made more efficient, notably in order to ensure efficient identification mechanisms and to prevent multiple accounts per player and access by minors to online gambling websites; recommends the exchange of best practices between Member States on enforcement measures — such as on establishing white and black lists of illegal gambling websites, jointly defining secure and traceable payment solutions, and considering the feasibility of blocking financial transactions — in order to protect consumers against illegal operators.”<sup>19</sup>

<https://eur-lex.europa.eu/legal-content/EN/TXT/HTML/?uri=CELEX:52013IP0348&from=IT>

77. Since banks and payment solutions providers can block payments based on suspicions, sanction hits, or localisation – based on the anti-money laundering regulations, it seems that the technology is available to block the payments to and from illegal operators. In Belgium, a blacklist has been established and it shouldn't be too difficult to come up with a process to obtain the financial data from these illegal websites.

7.3 Contractual clauses for payment providers

78. Not only the Belgian banks need to monitor the transactions to and from these illegal websites, but the payment solution providers have a responsibility as well since they are often the ones concluding the agreements with these websites.

79. We recommend a legal obligation to insert in any agreement between a Belgian bank and a payment solutions provider, a contractual clause of vigilance for the payment solutions provider make sure the illegal website doesn't offer its services in Belgium. This would make the concerned parties aware of their responsibilities as it would put pressure on the payment solutions provider to conduct a thorough due diligence procedure on the illegal website and would put pressure (albeit commercial) on the illegal website not to offer its services in Belgium since the services of the payment solutions provider are used around the world and are customer friendly.

7.4 Involve Big Tech

80. The different platforms through which the illegal sites advertise in Belgium need to contribute their part as well. Most of these platforms are part of Google, Apple and Meta (all part of the "Big Tech") but other social media or application platforms should be targeted as well.

81. As discussed in chapter 5, illegal websites often take recourse to dishonest practices such as disguising themselves as a fun and harmless game application that, upon opening, redirects to their website. Due to this classification as a harmless game they get through the mazes of the net and it makes you wonder how thoroughly the applications submitted to the different mobile application stores are vetted.

82. This is not simply a Belgian issue, but it impacts everyone, child or adult, opening this app. They are under the impression of having downloaded a harmless game and eventually end up on a gambling website. The concerned app stores need to implement a stricter due diligence procedure to approve game (or any type) applications. It can be as simple as at least downloading the app, opening it and reviewing it once it has launched.

83. The same goes for the different advertisements available on social media for games that are clearly not games and do not even attempt to hide it. They offer big bonuses, use logos of existing (Belgian) banks and exorbitant amounts of winnings, all under the pretense of an app with an innocent sounding name and cute looking logo. How these advertisements can be approved and specifically target the Belgian market is beyond our comprehension.

84. We urge our political leadership to enter in to contact with this Big Tech to able to find a solution to this problem that will only multiply due to the advertising space freed up due to the advertising ban in Belgium.

7.5 Proposal to implement rules in the law and list of illegal operators.

85. We suggest strongly to implement the above proposal in the law, especially when it comes to the partners that won't willingly collaborate in this fight against illegal operators since it is not their main concern (Big Tech), on a Belgian or European level.

86. If certain aspects of player protection can't be left in the hands of the gambling sector through autoregulation since gambling companies are still companies which require profits, and therefore the protection measures need to be written down in the law and sanctioned, the same applies to all above-mentioned actors which are companies that need profits as well.

87. The absence of such legal measures will lead to diminished player protection, especially in the light of the recent restrictions on the legal market which lead to less visibility for and a less user-friendly experience on legal gambling websites. If player protection is one of the highest priorities of the government, the battle against the illegal sector is something that they should legally reinforce through the implementation of restrictive measures such as the proposed measures above.

8. Advertising ban

8.1 Purpose of channelisation

88. Games of chance date back to Roman and Greek times and are a part of many cultures all around the world. When there was a ban on games of chance in Belgium, they were still practiced and even at one point a policy of tolerance was created by the prosecutors general toward certain games of chance<sup>20</sup>. The Belgian legislator opted to legalise these games of chance to able to redirect players towards a regulated environment where certain measures for player protection are taken.

This is the concept of channelisation: directing and guiding players towards legal and regulated games of chance within a specific jurisdiction. By legalising games of chance, governments aim to establish a framework that ensures player protection, responsible gambling practices, and the prevention of illegal or unregulated gambling. Through channelisation, governments seek to steer players away from illicit or offshore operators and encourage them to engage with licensed and compliant platforms, thereby maximizing player safety, regulatory oversight, and tax revenue collection.

In summary, channelisation serves as a mechanism to ensure that individuals participating in games of chance do so within a regulated and lawful framework, providing a safer and more controlled gambling experience while supporting the government's objective of oversight and revenue generation.

89. The European Parliament has expressed the same objective in its resolution of 15 November 2011 on online gambling in the Internal Market.

“8. Is of the opinion that an attractive, well-regulated provision of gambling services, both on the Internet and via traditional physical gambling channels, is necessary to ensure that consumers do not use operators which do not fulfil national licensing requirements”.<sup>21</sup>

90. To achieve the objective of channelisation and effectively steer players towards legal and regulated games of chance, it is crucial for the legal sector to remain attractive and visible. In the absence of an attractive offer or when too many restrictions are laid upon the legal sector, channelisation rates tend to be lower or decrease.<sup>22</sup> Creating an appealing and competitive legal gambling market is essential to capture the interest and engagement of players. By offering a compelling range of games, attractive bonuses, fair odds, and innovative features, the legal sector can effectively compete with illegal or unregulated operators.

91. Maintaining reasonable and balanced regulations that prioritize player protection while allowing for a reasonable level of entertainment is vital. When the legal sector remains appealing and competitive, it not only encourages players to choose licensed platforms over illicit ones but also fosters a sense of trust and confidence in the regulated gambling environment. By continuously enhancing the attractiveness of the legal sector, governments can better achieve their channelisation goals, ensuring that players are protected, revenue is maximized, and the unregulated market is minimized.

92. To this day, the channelisation principle is the main reason for governments all over the world to regulate the gambling market instead of banning it. It is easier for a government to control the sector and to protect the players when they are in the legal, regulated circuit.

8.2 Restrictions on the legal sector without sufficient knowledge of the sector

93. Over the past few years, the Belgian gambling act has been modified multiple times, each time introducing new restrictions in the light of player protection. While most of those restrictions are implemented with the best intentions, some of the most recent measures might have the opposite effect and might be detrimental to the channelisation and therefore to player protection.

94. Some of those recent measures simply lack logical coherence. A recent example of such restrictions involves the proposal to split various mixed offer websites into separate platforms, essentially tripling the weekly deposit limit for players from €200 to €600 within a single brand. While this proposal is the result of a strict reading of the interpretation by the Constitutional Court and probably originates from well-meaning intentions, they demonstrate a lack of comprehensive understanding of the sector, resulting in a proposition that would decrease player protection, as the Belgian Gaming Commission confirmed<sup>23</sup>.

95. It seems however, the government did not seek to gain insight in or more knowledge of the sector before adopting these very severe restrictions on advertising for legal operators as the Belgian Gaming Commission wasn't consulted correctly about the advertising restrictions<sup>24</sup>, the Royal Decree doesn't consider the illegal sector and the different remarks and questions formulated by the State Council were not answered or simply ignored.

8.2.1 Illegal operators

96. In theory, operators in the EU must adhere to these same rules<sup>25</sup> but will still be considered illegal operators if they do not hold a licence. What has become clear during this study is that without the proper reinforcement of these rules upon illegal operators, the objective of player protection and channelization is threatened. In practice, the advertising ban will disproportionately impact only the legal operators (excluding the National Lottery), while illegal operators will be able to operate as before.

97. An advertising ban (or severe restrictions) that exclusively targets legal operators while allowing illegal operators to continue advertising will reinforce the already existing competitiveness disparity between the two sectors. Legal operators already face limitations, such as the EPIS-check, the weekly deposit limits, and a ban on offering bonuses. All of these rules are not applicable to their illegal counterparts. By further restricting the ability of legal operators to advertise, the ban creates an unequal playing field between the legal sector and the illegal sector and diminishes their visibility and reach. This imbalance tilts the advantage towards illegal operators who can freely promote their services, potentially attracting customers away from the regulated market.

98. In this scenario, the advertising ban may unintentionally increase the illegal sector's market share, making it more challenging for legal operators to compete effectively. Moreover, it can create confusion among consumers who may encounter advertising from illegal operators and mistakenly perceive them as legitimate and regulated entities.

99. Addressing the competitiveness disparity and promoting a level playing field is crucial to maintaining a high channelisation rate. It requires comprehensive measures that not only restrict advertising by illegal operators but also ensure that legal operators have reasonable opportunities to promote their services within the confines of responsible gambling practices. Striking the right balance between consumer protection measures and supporting the competitiveness of legal operators is key to achieving a successful channelisation strategy.

8.2.2 Possible discrimination between the National Lottery and legal operators

100. Moreover, these restrictions were adopted without correctly considering the state-owned monopoly that operates games of chance. While the Belgian Gaming Commission did not get consulted by the government, the advertising ban was a "nice to have" request from the National Lottery<sup>26</sup> which effectively escapes these restrictions arguing that they need to be able to advertise to be able to fulfil their societal role (see chapter 9).

101. The existing advertising ban appears to be indicative of a government's inability to effectively regulate the legal gambling sector, resulting in a reliance on prohibition as a solution. Unfortunately, this approach is likely to have a negative impact on the channelisation rate.<sup>27</sup> Instead of implementing efficient regulations that encourage responsible gambling within the legal framework, the government's choice to resort to prohibition may inadvertently push players towards unregulated or illicit platforms. This counterproductive strategy undermines the goal of channelisation, which aims to guide players towards safe and regulated gambling options.

102. If the government genuinely prioritizes player protection, it must shift its focus to combating the illegal sector rather than burdening the legal sector with discriminatory measures. Without taking substantial action against illegal operators, the restrictions imposed on the legal sector risk alienating players and driving them towards the illegal sector or the state-owned monopolist.

103. Considering both player protection and the state treasury, the latter would be the more desirable outcome. However, achieving this goal still necessitates dismantling the illegal sector, which appears to be growing stronger under the current circumstances. To effectively safeguard players and maximise revenue for the state, proactive measures must be taken to weaken and dismantle illegal gambling operations.

8.3 Level Playing Field

104. To optimise channelisation, a level playing field on both regulatory and taxation level is a necessity. In the absence of such level playing field, illegal operators will keep on offering products the National Lottery cannot (yet) offer and attract evermore Belgian customers.

105. A level playing field needs to be implemented with regards to the rules that apply to the legal operators. This can be divided in two main topics: on one hand, a non-discriminatory, attractive, and fair market, correctly divided between the legal operators and the public operator (National Lottery) – this is discussed in chapter 9 – and on the other hand, a strict enforcement policy on the illegal operators that offer their products to Belgian customers without the appropriate safety controls, as requested by Belgian regulation, applied.

106. A level playing field on the tax level, especially within the European Union, can reinforce the above enforcement policy and deter illegal operators from keeping on offering their services to Belgian customers. We'll delve deeper into this subject in chapter 10.

107. However, it is worth noting that there have been ongoing discussions and efforts in many countries to address these disparities and promote a more level playing field within the gambling industry. Regulatory reforms and initiatives have been introduced to enhance fairness, competition, and consumer protection.

108. In recent years, there has been a growing recognition of the need for equal treatment and consistent regulation across the gambling sector, regardless of ownership. This has led to calls for increased transparency, stricter enforcement of regulations, and the establishment of independent regulatory bodies to oversee the industry more effectively. These measures aim to minimize preferential treatment and ensure that all operators, regardless of their ownership, operate within a fair and regulated environment.

109. In the absence this level playing field and visibility for legal operators, illegal operators will keep on offering products the National Lottery cannot (yet) offer and attract more and more Belgian customers.

9. Level Playing Field with the National Lottery

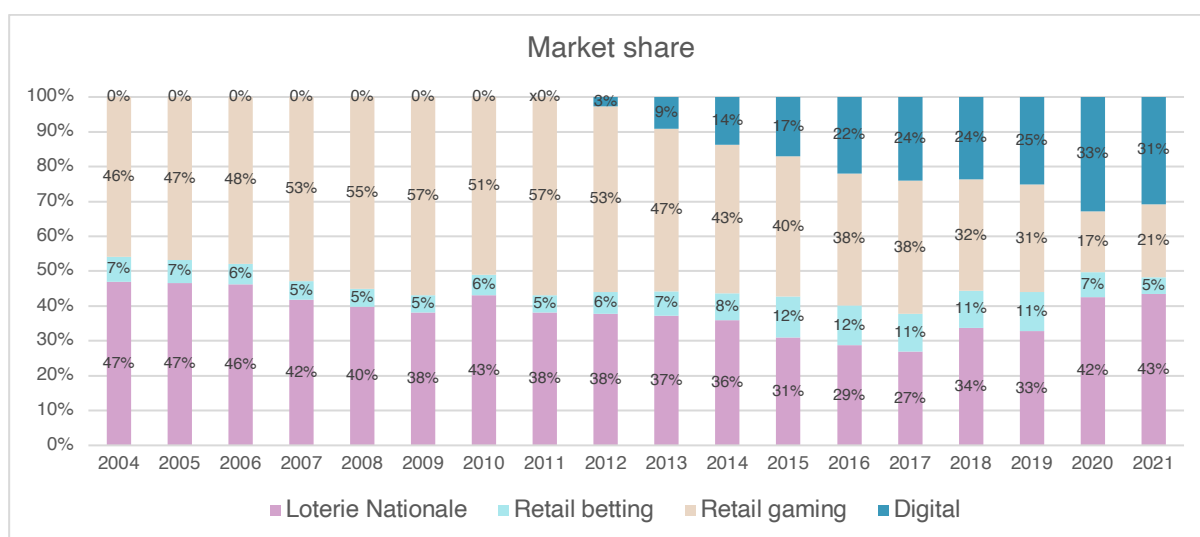

110. The purpose of this study is not to question the existence of the National Lottery, it is to get an overview of the different restrictions that are applied to the legal operators (private vs. public) and how to better protect all players. The fact that a big part of the National Lottery's revenues flow back to good causes and the government does not justify protecting their players less. Developing a gambling addiction does not depend on who is receiving the money.

111. Some of the privileges of the National Lottery could be questioned in the light of player protection and competition law (where the National Lottery comes into competition with the private legal sector).

112. Certainly, some of the restrictions imposed on the National Lottery do not apply to the private sector, but it seems the privileges outweigh these restrictions. This chapter aims to give a high-level overview of the different restrictions imposed on the private sector and how they apply differently or do not apply to the National Lottery.

9.1 Ratio Legis of the existence of the National Lottery

113. The National Lottery was founded in 1943 as a means to help raise charity for Congo (Colonial Lottery). In 1962 it became the National Lottery<sup>28</sup> and it has since then evolved throughout the years into a state monopoly holder, holding around 35% of the total gambling market in 2021<sup>29</sup>. The monopoly held by the National Lottery concerns lotteries and scratch cards only.

<sup>29</sup> Numbers based on the annual reports by both the National Lottery and the Belgian Commission, as well as the information collected by H2 Gambling Capital.

114. In 1991, a law was passed giving the National Lottery legal personality under the control of the Minister of Finances<sup>30</sup>. The legal framework for the National Lottery now encompassed lotteries, scratch cards, forms of betting, competitions, and games of chance. In 2002, the National Lottery became a state-owned public limited liability company.

115. The offering of the products and the channels through which they are offered to the customers has evolved as well. The National Lottery became part of EuroMillions in 2004<sup>31</sup>, in 2010 they started offering their products online<sup>32</sup>, in 2017 the online woohoo games were launched<sup>33</sup>, and in 2019 the National Lottery started opening their own Lottery Shops<sup>34</sup> (next to the other retail channels through which their products can be bought).

116. The reasoning behind this monopoly that evolved over time can be found in the management agreement:

“Art. 2. The National Lottery is entrusted with the following public service tasks:

(1) In the public interest and according to commercial methods, to organise public lotteries, betting, competitions and games of chance, in accordance with the provisions of the law. In performing this task, the National Lottery acts as a socially responsible and professional provider of gambling pleasure. [...]

Art. 4. The National Lottery undertakes to offer the public service tasks provided for in Article 6, § 1, 1° to 4°, of the Law throughout the entire territory of Belgium to all residents of the Kingdom, and in accordance with the promulgated rules of the game, using the most recent technological means. [...]

The National Lottery must seek channels and tools to maintain its market penetration. The challenge is to increase market share - without being market-expanding - where the National Lottery is competing with high-risk gambling providers to channel players to its low-risk games.

Art. 5. The National Lottery has the obligation, through a modern and attractive offer, to attract existing players of lotteries, betting, competitions, and games of chance to low-risk games, without acting in a market-expanding manner. The low-risk nature of a game (addiction, attraction, losses, etc.) is evaluated by an objective method. [...]<sup>35</sup> (own underlining).

117. In short, the National Lottery is tasked to offer low-risk games and try to divert the existing players for higher-risk games to their own games, all without expanding the market or create new players. However, as we'll see below, it seems both objectives are no longer met but no actions are being taken by the government.

9.2 Evolution of games and risk profile:

<sup>35</sup> Royal Decree concerning the approval of the management contract between the Belgian State and the National Lottery, limited company of public law, BOG 16 September 2021.

118. Whereas the National Lottery started out as a simple lottery, over the years they have expanded their activities and have set foot on the terrain of the private operators in multiple ways<sup>36</sup>. They currently offer:

- 7 lotteries (retail and online);
- 25 types of scratch cards (retail and online) and
- almost 60 types of Woohoo games (online only).

9.2.1 Risk profile: from low to high-risk games

119. In the latest discussions on the National Lottery's exemption from the advertising ban, reference was made, by the government to a 2017 study mentioned in the "Factsheet Gokken" by VAD<sup>37</sup> to justify this exemption:

"[...] The National Lottery aims to channel gamblers towards the less dangerous offer of lottery games and scratch cards. Moreover, this offer is strictly regulated and controlled. [...] The government directly supervises the National Lottery by concluding the management contract, by appointing the directors who supervise the management committee and by the wide-ranging powers of the government commissioners. [...] This distinction is not only in line with the existing legal dichotomy within Belgian gaming policy, but also scientifically substantiated. For example, research by Van Rooij, 2017, shows that lotteries and scratch cards show a significantly lower risk of addiction.

According to this study, lottery players show problematic gambling behaviour in only 6.8% of cases. For scratch tickets, the figure is 7.1%. The other gaming products recognise a significantly higher risk of and problematic gambling behaviour:

- Sports betting: 17.7%
- Poker: 12.2%
- Slot machines: 26.2%
- Casino games: 22.7%"<sup>38</sup>

120. The State Council examined this exemption in its advice and concluded that the Report to the King should be able to demonstrate that the National Lottery would apply similar measures and that this exemption is based on objective and updated figures:

"Taking these elements into account, the exclusion of the National Lottery from the advertising restriction regime that the draft intends to impose on private operators is only conceivable on condition that the obligations concerning "responsible gaming" and gambling addiction prevention, which the National Lottery is obliged to fulfil by virtue of the legal framework applicable to it, can lead to a comparable extent to the public health objective pursued by the present draft.

The report to the King must be able to fully demonstrate this and must be based on objective and updated analyses, otherwise the draft will have to be revised regarding its non-applicability to the National Lottery for activities other than those related to its class F1 licence”<sup>39</sup> (own underlining)

121. While the State Council asked for more recent studies and stricter measures for the National Lottery, none were ever submitted, nor were restrictions applied, while it seems, from a more recent study, these figures are completely outdated.

122. This more recent study concludes that, while lotteries present a more moderate risk for gambling addiction, the instant games (Woohoo) and the scratch cards (Win for Life, Subito, ...) present much higher risks than the 2017 study mentioned by the government and that these risk levels are comparable to the private sector, on which restrictions are applied.

123. This table above<sup>40</sup> is in stark contrast with the minimal risk level claimed for their scratch games and e-games (third party games):

“Since 2015, the National Lottery has been using SERENIGAME, a tool developed by La Française des Jeux, to analyse the risks associated with its games. The analysis found that the 18 new or redesigned scratch cards marketed by the National Lottery in 2016 carried minimal risk.”(own underlining)<sup>41</sup>

124. Even when the Woohoo-games were introduced, they were considered as “minimal risk”:

“Since 2015, the National Lottery has been using SERENIGAME, a tool developed by La Française des Jeux, to analyse the risks associated with games. The analysis found that the 12 new tickets and redesigns or families of tickets as well as the 9 e-games (third party games) brought to market in 2017 by the National Lottery carried minimal risk.”(own underlining)<sup>42</sup>

125. A little more information on the tool can be found in the annual report 2021 of the National Lottery:

“In 2021, the National Lottery will continue to use the "SERENIGAME" analysis matrix (from Française des Jeux) to assess the risks of games according to objective criteria.

<sup>39</sup> Advice St.C, n°72.190 for the Royal Decree of the 27th of February 2022 determining the modalities for advertising for games of chance, BOG 8th of March 2023, page 29164.

During the development of each product, this matrix enables the risks of a game to be analysed according to a procedure in which all the stages in the construction of the product mechanism are described, including the risk analysis.

This tool, subdivided into "SERENIGAME UNIVERSAL" and "SERENIGAME SCRATCHING", is a high-performance risk analysis tool that integrates 5 different families of analysis criteria:

- 1. The rhythm of the game: frequency, time pressure, etc. ;*
- 2. The illusion of control and player involvement: stakes, pay options, etc;*
- 3. Incentives to play again: impression of a near-win, payment deadlines, etc;*
- 4. Attractiveness of winnings: redistribution rate, etc;*
- 5. Universe and environment: presence of a screen, presence of music, etc.”<sup>43</sup>*

126. The National Lottery specifically states that the different measures on its website reduce the risk of these games. However, if this applies to the National Lottery, this should also be considered when evaluating the risk of the games of private operators and taking regulatory decisions based on these risks. This is seemingly not the case<sup>44</sup> and decisions are being taken by the government without proper studies and research.

127. In the last 5 years, the regulatory and technological landscape has changed entirely and unfortunately the legal framework is always a step behind the reality. Lawmakers, the National Lottery, the sector and especially player protection would profit immensely from new scientific research on the Belgian market on the risks of certain games and how the different restrictions factor in.

9.2.2 Number of players and addiction risk

128. In the logic of player protection, another thing to take into account is the number of players that are being reached by the private or public legal sector. The National Lottery prides itself on having more than 6,5 million unique players<sup>45</sup> and 1.422.435 unique online accounts whereas the private sector counts 1.942.974 unique active players online and 566.803 unique retail customers<sup>46</sup>.

129. The study cited by the government states herself that lotteries and scratch cards are by far the most popular gambling products.<sup>47</sup> As shown of above, the games of the National Lottery are widely known with the Belgian customers and are often the first contact with games of chance for teenagers with gaming and betting products.<sup>48</sup>

130. The number reached by the private sector is a third of the public reached by the National Lottery. Even if the games offered are less risky, which is debatable given the emergence of the Woohoo-games,

<sup>44</sup> The advertising ban exemption for the National Lottery has been pushed through without providing the studies requested by the State Council, see point 120.

Not all retail players are registered since the registration and identification procedures don't apply to all retail establishments. The real number will therefore be higher.

<sup>47</sup> "Gambling prevalence (<12 months, real money bets). The most popular games, where real money is bet, were: Lotteries, 53.9%, Scratchcards, 43.6%, Sports betting, 6.0%, Informal bets, 5.3%, Video machines, 2.6%." Van Rooij, A. J., Vanden Abeele, M. M. there might be as many (or even more) customers of the National Lottery at risk for problematic gambling behaviour than in the private sector.

9.3 Privileges of the National Lottery

131. As mentioned above, a level playing field between the legal operators (private and public) and the illegal sector would be beneficial for player protection.

132. Contrary to the latest statements of the National Lottery's CEO<sup>49</sup>, the National Lottery pleaded for this Level Playing Field in 2016, stating the exact same thing as the legal private sector is currently stating:

"THE CHANNELLING POLICY THREATENED BY UNFAIR COMPETITION

Never before has the National Lottery had to operate in such a competitive market as in 2016. Belgium is one of the most competitive markets in Europe. This does not in itself pose a problem, but it does presuppose a coherent gambling policy, a consumer protection policy commensurate with the real risks of addiction inherent in this form of gambling, and a regulatory framework in which the rules of the game are the same for all players ("level playing field").

2016 was a year in which no progress was made on this front, as the Gaming Commission highlighted on several occasions the fundamental lack of a regulatory framework and effective controls. The lack of moderators, the increase in gambling in pubs as a result of a misuse of the legislative framework, the use of attractive but misleading bonuses, the poor identification of players when opening an online account, etc. are disrupting the balance of the gambling market, but also the National Lottery and the consumer." (own underlining)<sup>50</sup>

133. The same request was repeated in the annual report of 2017, was modified in 2019 (where they pleaded for restriction based on risk) but no longer figures in the later annual reports. This coincides with the date when restrictions were being put on the legal private sector with the first Royal Decree on publicity for online gambling websites<sup>51</sup> and the modification of the law on games of chance<sup>52</sup>.

134. It seems the National Lottery, due to the current restrictions applied on the private sector only, considers the Level Playing Field to be established and claims that they shouldn't even be compared to the legal private sector<sup>53</sup>. This is a completely opposite view than in 2016, for which the cause perhaps can be found in the multitude of privileges they currently enjoy.

<sup>49</sup> "Unless state secretary Sammy Mahdi (CD&V) decides otherwise, the National Lottery will escape the new royal decree banning gambling companies from advertising. And that's just the way it should be, thinks National Lottery CEO Jannie Haek. And here's why: "We are not a gambling company at all." <sup>53</sup> "Secondly, and this goes back to what the President said, if the regulator, the government, puts us in the same basket as private operators, there is a risk that the baby will be thrown out with the bathwater.", Annual Report National Lottery 2021, page 7.

135. Achieving fairness in the gambling industry requires consistent and equitable regulations applied to all operators, irrespective of their ownership or game offerings. Striving for a level playing field ensures fair competition and safeguards consumer protection across the sector. However, some countries have instated a state monopoly for (certain types of) games of chance.

136. The extent of preferential treatment for state-owned gambling companies can vary from country to country. In some cases, state-owned operators have historically enjoyed certain advantages or exemptions that are not available to their private sector counterparts.

137. The National Lottery, being state-owned, operates with the backing and support of the government. This unique position can provide them with certain advantages and privileges, including exemptions from restrictions that are imposed on private operators. However, when almost none of the restrictions apply to that monopolist, without adequate justification, these privileges can become discriminatory.

138. Stating the National Lottery doesn't have its own protection mechanisms and limitation would be false. However, the question remains why the different applicable regulations are that different while the products are not as different as it might seem<sup>54</sup>.

139. Currently, in light of this comparative study, apart from the age limit, the identification process and the fact that they are state-owned and licensed, the National Lottery is seemingly on the same regulatory level of protection as the other illegal websites we studied seeing as almost none of the restrictions imposed on legal operators are applied to the National Lottery such as a ban on bonuses, advertising, application of EPIS upon each login, deposit limit checked with the National Bank, ...

140. In the following points we'll share an overview of the different regulations imposed on the legal sector over the last 5 years and how they apply (or don't) to the National Lottery as well.

9.3.1 Advertising ban

141. Whether or not the advertising ban should be applicable to the National Lottery has been a point of discussion with the State Council<sup>55</sup> but between politicians as well. When asked why the National Lottery wasn't subject to this advertising ban, the Minister of Justice replied that he isn't competent to regulate the National Lottery and referred this question through to the Minister of Finance who stated that additional measures are certainly an option<sup>56</sup>. More than a year later, no restrictions have been applied on the advertising level.

<sup>54</sup> "Finance Minister Vincent Van Peteghem (CD&V) has therefore ordered the National Lottery to make the Woohoo games much more clearly on the lines of a lottery product, "the distinction with a game of chance must be much clearer", his spokesman said. Justice minister Vincent Van Quickenborne is also pushing for this. As to what adjustments need to be made, the minister is discussing this with the National Lottery, which did not want to comment officially. But in purely practical terms, the National Lottery will have to indicate much more clearly than today to anyone playing such a Woohoo game, that in advance a computer already decides whether you win or lose." Newspaper Het Nieuwsblad, 28 March 2023, https://www.nieuwsblad.be/cnt/dmf20230327\_97462229

<sup>55</sup> "In concrete terms, as soon as the new regulations on gambling advertising are applicable, additional advertising restrictions may also be imposed on the National Lottery by virtue of article 7 and article 67, paragraph 5 of the management contract. One could envisage, for example, the prior submission of the advertising policy to the Board of Directors, 12 of whose 14 members are appointed by the government, and the imposition of limits on the budgets that the National Lottery can spend annually on the advertising of lottery games and scratch tickets." Advice St.C, n°72.190 for the Royal Decree of the 27th of February 2022 determining the modalities for advertising for games of chance, BOG 8th of March 2023, page 29148..

<sup>56</sup> "As for the question on the National Lottery, reportedly my colleague Mahdi expressed his willingness to take initiatives on the

142. Another open question remains as to which extent the advertising ban is the result of the request made by the National Lottery in exchange for extra millions in monopoly fee.

143. As a justification, the National Lottery states that it is not a game of chance. This reasoning can be questioned: if you consider the National Lottery to not be a game of chance, you are not a direct competitor of the legal sector. However, this is completely contrary to the statements made in their annual reports and the letter in question as well as the general definition of a game of chance. In this case, without competition offering the same or similar products, and in the light of channelization you wouldn't need to advertise since, given the monopoly, you are the only one offering this product.

144. If you are considered as a game of chance, the same rules should apply to all operators, private and public. The rules and their extent can vary depending on the level of risk of the games offered but this would require more studies and research on these risks and the tools that limit these risks.

145. Even if we consider the risk for the National Lottery (lottery and scratch cards) being lower, this doesn't justify the complete absence of application of the restrictions imposed on the private sector. Considering the mission given to the National Lottery and the justification of the Royal Decree publicity two main questions can be raised.

146. The first question relates to the fact that the National Lottery is to channel existing players<sup>57</sup>. This same logic is applied in the Royal Decree Advertising where advertising is mainly only allowed for people looking specifically for games of chance. If the mission of the National Lottery is to channel the existing players and not create new players (since they're not allowed to expand the market), this restriction should apply to the National Lottery as well.

147. This is currently not the case since the National Lottery is advertising on social media and a lot of different places that have nothing to do with gambling and even where a lot of youth (and minors) are present such as (family) festivals. On these festivals, the excess tissue on the entrance bracelet can be cut off at the "Win-for-Life-Stand" at the festival and you will get a "fake" Win-For-Life ticket in return that allows you to win goodies or a real Win-for-Life ticket. You can also buy these tickets at the stand. These marketing tactics are creating new players and don't have anything to do with channeling existing players towards their own offer.

L'été des festivals avec Win for Life !

En plus de vous faire gagner plein d'accès pour les plus grands festivals belges durant toute la saison estivale, nous sommes aussi à vos côtés sur vos festivals préférés (Couleur Café, Graspop, Rock Werchter, les Ardentes, ...) pour vous faire gagner de chouettes cadeaux. Passez nous voir au stand Win for Life !

Coupez, Grattez, Gagnez !

Sur nos festivals partenaires, vous retrouverez l'action emblématique de Win for Life « Taillé pour gagner ». On our partnerfestivals, you will find the well known logo of Win For Life "Cut to Win". The principle is simple: you let them cut the excess of your access bracelet at the stand and you will receive a "Scratch and Win" ticket. If this is a terms of the National Lottery's advertising policy, it is a well known fact that the previously rich' will hopefully soon be a thing of the past." , Parliamentary Questions 55027902C and 55027914C, 25 May 2022, CRIV 55 COM 798, page 17-21

<sup>57</sup> Art. 5 of the Royal Decree concerning the approval of the management contract between the Belgian State and the National Lottery, limited company of public law, BOG 16 September 2021.

148. The second question is regarding the marketing strategies used by the National Lottery such as the “Happy Monday”-bonuses and the content of the advertising. Since 2018 some restrictions were put on advertising done by the private operators: ban on bonuses, advertising should not incite players, should not pressure people to play, ....

149. These restrictions are not applied by the National Lottery seeing as can be seen in the following adverts:

150. The above questions lead to the third and final question: as long as there is no recent objective<sup>58</sup> scientific research on the risks and the impacts of these games that would justify an exemption, shouldn't the government protect players equally, regardless of who is offering the games by imposing the same base restrictions to be able to apply the same level of protection?

9.3.2 EPIS

151. The Minister of Justice is of the opinion this is one of the best tools to protect problem gamblers. If this is the case, there is no reason to not apply the EPIS-system for the sale of products of the National Lottery if it is applied for the private sector.

152. Online, this shouldn't be a big change for players since they already need to subscribe on the website using their National Registry Number.

<sup>58</sup> Both cited studies on the risk level of the games were requested by either the National Lottery or the private sector. Although we don't doubt the objectiveness of these studies, members of the government do (intervention Boukili Nabil in the Commission of Justice on the 18th of January 2023, <https://www.lachambre.be/media/index.html?language=fr&sid=55U3563&offset=2403>). No difference can be made between these two since they were both requested by an interested party.

153. In retail, if EPIS would be implemented for betting in newsagents in a simplified way – as announced included in some law proposals<sup>59</sup>, there is no reason as to why this should not be implemented for the National Lottery.

9.3.3 Higher Council for Lottery and Gaming Ethics

154. The management contract between the National Lottery and the government foresees the creation of an Ethics Committee in its article 7:

“[...] In order to help the National Lottery and the State to monitor these trends and developments, and to enable the National Lottery to adapt its ethical and responsible gambling policy, its offer and the development of new games in an ethical and sustainable manner with the necessary care and restraint, and in compliance with the principle of prudence, an independent body, called the Higher Council for Lottery and Gaming Ethics, is created. The High Council will :

- formulate, in complete independence, on its own initiative or on request, opinions on responsible gambling to the National Lottery's Board of Directors and to the Minister, taking into account the broader social trends and developments that must be closely monitored at all times;*
- checking whether the National Lottery's strategy complies with the rules commonly accepted by EL (European Lotteries) in terms of responsible gambling and providing advice to the Board of Directors on this subject;*
- to take part as a reference body and knowledge centre in any public debate on responsible gambling and player protection within the wider gambling market;*
- to be consulted before any regulatory or legislative change affecting the organisation or regulation of lotteries and games of chance and which threatens to affect the coherence of gambling and lottery policy;*
- carry out and disseminate studies on responsible gambling, player protection and ethics in the lottery and games of chance sector;*
- monitoring the problem of illegal gambling and lottery games and raising public awareness.*

[...] Half of the Board of Governors is made up of internal National Lottery specialists and half+1 of independent external experts. The chairman is appointed from the group of independent external experts.

[...]In accordance with article 24/1, § 1 of the law of 7 May 1999 on games of chance, betting, gambling establishments and the protection of players, the Board of Governors will take part in meetings organised by the Gaming Commission.”(own underlining)<sup>60</sup>

155. Based on this article, the Council being created should be informed beforehand on the legislative changes the government intends to apply on the entire sector. This gives the National Lottery an unfair competitive advantage compared to the private operators that don't necessarily have access to this information beforehand.

156. The same can be said for the obligation to involve this Council in any public debate on responsible gambling (see chapter 12). The private sector has tried for years to get heard or involved in this type of debates but continuously gets ignored. The National Lottery, by the bias of the Council, would be able to take part in these debates, with the exclusion of the private sector, constituting a privilege for the National Lottery.

<sup>59</sup> Preliminary draft law amending the law of 7 May 1999 on gambling, betting, gaming establishments and player protection, <https://technical-regulation-information-system.ec.europa.eu/en/notification/24841>

157. If this Council would be a truly independent Council, this could be a useful tool and evolution towards player protection. However, it being made up partly by experts from within the National Lottery on one side and independent experts on the other side, without involving the private sector in any way, this is by definition a biased council.

9.3.4 Regulator : Belgian Gaming Commission

158. The same applies for the representatives of the National Lottery's Minister that are present in the Belgian Gaming Commission. The National Lottery is being judge and party at the same time, since their subsidiary Scoore is being regulated by that same Gaming Commission.

159. Not only can they regulate themselves, but these members can influence policy decisions and get a say in sanction proceedings for private operators. How can it be justified that people, having the National Lottery's interest as a job, decide on the fate of its competitors by being part of the national regulator?

160. You could even expand this reasoning to the position of the National Lottery as a state-owned business. The only safeguard put in place is that these decisions will need to be public, issued by Royal Decree or law. In this case there is a minimum of (parliamentary) control but from this report it seems that some privileges are given to the National Lottery without justifiable reason, this a risk when you're both judge and party.

161. A law proposal, that was studied by the Belgian Gaming Commission in 2001<sup>61</sup>, consisted in the Belgian Gaming Commission being the regulator of the entire sector (to promote coherence in policy and framework). This is something that should, in our opinion, be considered. The fact that the National Lottery holds a monopoly on certain games should not mean they are not to be regulated by an independent organisation that is not the government (Minister) itself.

162. Creating a central regulator would mean all knowledge gets centralized, coherent regulation and policies are being created and player protection can be optimized as we are convinced that the National Lottery has interesting player protection mechanisms to teach the private sector and vice versa.

9.3.5 Woohoo games: "ceci n'est pas une pipe"

163. On 22 June 2022, the Gaming Commission was contacted by the Minister of Justice to investigate the Woohoo games offered by the National Lottery on its website, following a complaint lodged by a private operator. As a result of this investigation, the Gaming Commission published its report on these games.<sup>62</sup>

164. In this report the Gaming Commission concludes the following:

“It is clear from the above that the National Lottery offers, through Woohoo games, games that are similar to the products of private operators and that potentially fall within the definition of games of chance. This exploitation is justified by the National Lottery by the fact that these games are, according to it, Lottery games, whereas the Gaming Commission considers them to be games of chance.

This difference in interpretation may be due to the absence of a legal definition of the concept of lottery.

The Commission considers that, with a view to identical protection for players and full application of both the law of 7 May 1999 on games of chance and the law of 19 April 2002 on the National Lottery as amended by the law of 5 May 2022, an in-depth debate should be held on this subject.

The adaptation of the law of 5 May 2022 would have been a good opportunity to conduct this debate, but it was a missed opportunity insofar as parliamentary work was very limited and the Commission was not invited to give its opinion on this subject, even though it was a legislative initiative in a matter covered by the law of 7 May 1999, within the meaning of article 20 of this law.”

165. The National Lottery's foray into games resembling casino games, while utilizing a predefined plan of distribution of winnings ("lot")<sup>63</sup>, introduces a similarity in mechanics to traditional casino games. This raises questions about consistency in regulatory oversight, as private operators offering similar games would typically be subject to restrictions and regulations, such as the advertising ban.

166. After the report came out, the Minister of Finance asked the National Lottery to make it much more clear on their website that the Woohoo-games are lottery-games and not casino games. However, since the characteristics of the game don't change by putting a disclaimer on the game, this addition won't change anything to the qualification of the game itself.

167. The issue with these games being offered by the National Lottery is not specifically that they are being offered by the National Lottery but more that they would need a licence from the Gaming Commission and would need to be subject to the EPIS-checks if they are considered as a casino game.

168. Even if they are not considered casino games, they seem to constitute a higher risk than the lotteries and the scratch cards offered by the Gaming Commission, which would justify at least applying EPIS for this type of games.

<sup>63</sup> This plan of predefined "lots" and the difference with a Random Number Generator doesn't seem very clear cut given the explanations on the website of the National Lottery.

9.3.6 Bonus prohibition

169. As mentioned in point 9.3.1., the National Lottery is still allowed to offer bonuses and does so on a regular basis (Happy Monday, Lottery Club gifts).

170. Bonuses have been limited for private operators since 2018 following the Royal Decree Advertising 2018 and practically banned since February 2020 due to a decision of the State Council<sup>64</sup>. The National Lottery is not subject to this Royal Decree and is able to still offer bonuses and incite people to play their games.

171. The Report to the King states the following:

“Online gaming and betting providers outdo each other in offering the highest bonuses that allow players to play for free, so to speak. In practice, the conditions for enjoying these bonuses are far from transparent. Often new players are lured with bonuses of several hundred euros, but the player himself must first forfeit a multiple of that amount in order to receive these bonuses. Consequently, this advertising technique to offer bonuses is not only opaque, but also highly addictive. Therefore, this article provides that online gambling and betting may no longer be advertised, except on the operator's own site, by offering players all kinds of free games or bonuses in any form.

Advertising of bonuses is prohibited both with a view to luring new players and with regard to already registered players.[...]”(own underlining)<sup>65</sup>

172. The government considered that bonuses that are subject to wagering are the most addictive. The bonuses offered by the National Lottery are themselves subject to such a wagering requirement (playing at least one game) and are designed specifically to redirect lottery players to the “faster” games (scratch cards and Woohoo games).

9.3.7 Age limit

173. Currently the legal age for casino and dice games is set at 21 years, all the rest is 18 years.

174. However, a law proposal is pending and likely to be voted still this year to raise the minimum age to 21 for all games of chance. There have been many proposals to raise the minimum limit to participate in games of chance, coupled each time with a proposal to raise the limit for the National Lottery as well.

175. If the raise of the minimum age is meant to protect young people more, it should apply to the National Lottery as well seeing as their products seems to be the most popular with young people<sup>66</sup> and is seen as the steppingstone to the other types of games.

176. As before, in our opinion, if the minimum age for the private sector will be raised, the same should apply for the National Lottery, especially in the light of their obligation to not expand the market or attract new players. If the National Lottery is the only one to whom the 18+ limit applies, they will be creating new players and will therefore be breaching the management contract and the mission confided to them.

9.3.8 Licences and advice local authorities

177. Every type of retail licence for private operators needs to request at least an advice from the local authorities.

178. Since the National Lottery sells a lot of her products in retail (supermarkets, newsagents, pet shops, Lottery Shops), it might be advisable to:

- Foresee a request for advice so the local authorities know where games of chance are being sold and have a say in the matter as they have for all other retail outlets that offer games of chance, and;
- Foresee a (specific) licence for the retail outlets for Lottery products.

179. A licensing system would ensure an independent control. The retail outlets of the National Lottery are only controlled by the National Lottery itself. In case of infractions that might be the responsibility of the National Lottery itself, will they fine themselves? To avoid such self-regulation, which according to the Minister of Justice leads to no regulation, it might be more logical to submit those retail outlets to a control by an independent regulator such as the Belgian Gaming Commission.

10. Tax Level Playing Field

10.1 No Belgian tax

180. From a tax point of view, the activities of illegal gambling operators generate a huge loss of revenue for the state. Their revenues are not subject to federal, local or regional taxes.

181. Indeed, these operators, who are not established in Belgium, pay no corporate income tax, as they have no Belgian establishment. Yet gambling legislation in principle requires them to have a physical establishment in Belgium (which is therefore taxable there) in order to operate online. This represents a significant loss for the federal government, amounting to up to 25% of these companies' annual net profit.

182. Nor do these operators pay the regional tax on betting and gaming, since they have no server in Belgium. Under Belgian gambling law, a server must be set up in Belgium in order to operate an online gaming business. The Regions base their tax jurisdiction on the location of this server. An operator who infringes the law on games of chance is therefore de facto outside the tax jurisdiction of the regions, generating a loss of 11% of the actual gross margin generated by these operators on Belgian players.

183. Nor do these operators pay social security contributions, municipal and provincial taxes, or withholding tax on professional, movable or immovable property in Belgium.

184. Finally, and more indirectly, as illegal operators are based abroad, they do not consume goods and services that generate Belgian VAT. This VAT represents a direct, non-recoverable expense for operators holding a valid license - an additional tax from which illegal operators escape.

10.2 Possibility to tax winnings from illegal websites

185. Some operators have neither the licence nor the Belgian server required by gaming law to offer online gambling and betting to players based in Belgium (446 sites on the Gaming Commission's list ). These players operate illegally on Belgian territory, rake in colossal stakes deposited by Belgian players (an estimated 20% of the online gambling and betting market in Belgium) and escape all forms of taxation, be it income tax (Corporation Tax - federal tax) or betting (regional) tax.

186. In order to restore a certain level playing field between these operators and those operating legally, and to discourage Belgian players from visiting these illegal sites, it is proposed to subject Belgian players' winnings to personal income tax as miscellaneous income.

187. Legally, it is already possible to tax profits obtained from illegal gambling and betting sites on the basis of Article 90, paragraph 1er , 1°, ITC92 , which provides for the taxation of "miscellaneous income", ie. "profits or capital gains, whatever their qualification, resulting, even occasionally or accidentally, from arising from services, transactions or speculations of any kind or from services performed for third parties, outside the exercise of a professional activity, excluding transactions relating to the normal management of private assets consisting of real estate, securities and movable property".

188. In this regard, we point out, first, that it is a criminal offence to participate in a game of chance or a bet when the person concerned knows that the game is offered on a site that is not authorised under the Gaming Act (Article 4, §2 of the Gaming Act) and, second, that the possibility of taxing income from illegal activities is confirmed by the case law of the Court of Cassation and the Belgian courts . It is settled case law that, for the purpose of taxing income, tax law does not distinguish between income from a permitted activity and income from a non-permitted activity.

189. This results in the government being able to tax the winnings from players on this illegal website (around 20% of the market) at a rate of 33%.

190. Consideration should also be given to increasing tax revenues from corporate income tax and gaming tax, as taxing illegal profits through income tax would have the obvious effect of diverting players to the legal and taxed sector.

11. Necessity of actualised, scientific Belgian research

“According to research, that group of problem gamblers finances up to 40% of gambling companies’ turnover. So, they make a profit on the back of people with addiction”<sup>67</sup>

Vincent Van Quickenborne

191. Contrary to the statements from the Minister of Justice, legal operators do not want their player base to be addicted players. The study cited by the minister is an international study<sup>68</sup>, numbers for Belgium aren’t known because there isn’t much data available:

“International research shows that a large proportion of gaming revenue is generated by people with gambling problems (32%-40%). The share varies from country to country and by game type. Lotteries are the least dependent on revenue from persons with gambling problems. No Belgian or Flemish figures are available on this subject.” (own underlining)<sup>69</sup>

192. Given the fact that there is a strict policy in Belgium and the EPIS-system is implemented in most of the private sector, these international numbers cannot simply be transposed on the Belgian market.

11.1 Lack of actualised, Belgium oriented research

193. The latest scientific Belgian study to our knowledge was done in 2018 and the regulations have drastically changed since then. This shows that in the current situation, regulatory decisions are not based on studies done in Belgium nor are the existing regulations considered in the decisions process, such as indicated by the State Council<sup>70</sup>.

194. Politicians and operators have been asking (seemingly in vain) for over 20 years for more (independent) studies on this subject.

- In 1998 a proposal for resolution<sup>71</sup> already mentioned that there is not enough scientific research present to get an idea on the problem of gambling addiction in Belgium:

“The resolution asks the government to urgently pursue scientific research. Two, albeit limited, studies have already been carried out by the Matt Talbot Centre in Borgerhout. In the province of Antwerp, a survey of GPs was organised to gain a better understanding of the referral problem. In addition, an analysis was made of reports of gambling addiction in mental health centres in Flanders. In an amendment to the resolution, I therefore asked the government to communicate the figures on this to Parliament. The committee approved this amendment, making it part of the resolution submitted to the Senate for approval.”

- In 2002, the Belgian Gaming Commission stated that scientific research is needed for all categories of games of chance<sup>72</sup>:

“The Gaming Commission believes that a scientific survey on the gambling addiction of the entire population should be commissioned. Gambling addiction is a phenomenon that deserves to be investigated by independent researchers. This study should cover all games of chance operated in Belgium, including National Lottery games, internet games of chance and perhaps leisure and sports games. To focus only on games of chance would compromise the objectivity of the study.”

- In 2016, the European Parliament asked for more studies in its resolution of 10 March 2009 on the integrity of online gambling<sup>73</sup>:

“Calls on the Commission to initiate research on online gambling and the risk of developing a gambling addiction, for example how advertising influences gambling addiction, whether it is possible to create a common European categorisation of games according to addictive potential, and possible preventive and curative measures,”

In focus solely on games of chance would bias the objectivity of the report.[...] In any case, we need to ask ourselves at least the following questions: Are some games more or less harmful to health than others? How many people are affected by gambling? Which gamblers develop addictions? How can gamblers be best protected? In terms of danger and mental health, what are the harmful effects of entertainment games and games of chance? Can a comparison be made? - In 2016, the European Parliament asked once again for more studies in its resolution of 10 September 2013 on online gambling in the internal market<sup>74</sup>:

“Believes that additional research and data are needed in order to quantify compulsive gambling and the risks associated with different forms of gambling; calls on all the Member States and the Commission to carry out, in a coordinated manner, further studies to understand problem gambling; notes that gambling operators have a responsibility to contribute towards the prevention of gambling addiction;”

- In 2022, the General Policy Statement from the department of Public Health<sup>75</sup> stated the following:

“As limited Belgian research is available, mapping the extent of the problem is very difficult. In general, it is said that around 0.4% to 2% of the population is affected by a gambling disorder (“lifetime gambling disorder”), with problem gamblers making up an additional 1.3% to 2.3% of the population.”

195. More than 20 years later, there are very few “independent” studies on gambling addiction available. This way it is very difficult to take effective measures and the risk of counterproductive effects is higher.

11.2 Research requested by the operators

196. Multiple legal operators, including the National Lottery have requested some scientific research on gambling addiction, on player behaviour and management tools. However, these studies – even though conducted by a (team of) scientific researcher(s) – are often disregarded as biased and therefore not taken into account in the political decision making.

197. While studies, requested by someone not having any financial interest in the matter will often be the most trustworthy. Given the fact that the National Lottery is state-owned, any study requested could be considered as biased, however the result of these studies, requested by interested parties, should not be discarded straight-away. A collection of multiple studies, from every point of view, is probably very useful to get an overview of the sector and the problematic in its entirety.

198. There is a proposal of law, which we fully support, which aims to further encourage research into gambling addiction by requiring the industry to report on the research it conducts into it and the resources it puts into it<sup>76</sup>.

11.3 Research alone won’t solve the gambling addiction problem

199. A very important remark to make in this chapter is that research alone won’t improve player protection and won’t resolve gambling addiction. Research allows to better understand the amplitude and details of gambling addiction and allows for targeted and adapted measures that protect the player instead of sending them to the illegal circuit.

200. From a recent survey done by the Belgian Gaming Commission with excluded players, it seems that there is not enough visibility around the different instances problematic gamblers can turn to when suffering from gambling addiction.<sup>77</sup> The respondents also find that psychological help should be offered upon exclusion to help them manage their addiction after being excluded.

201. Banning and strict regulation might prevent gambling addiction in some cases but won't solve a gambling addiction, the underlying problem that leads to developing a gambling addiction will still be present. A problematic gambler may well turn to other operators where he is allowed to play (National Lottery and the illegal sector) as noticed in the above-mentioned survey<sup>78</sup>.

202. More capacity and more visibility for the different support organisation and integrating the risk for gambling addiction in education through awareness campaigns<sup>79</sup> (similar to drug prevention campaigns and sexual education programs) can lower the number of people falling into gambling addiction. More generally, the trend toward more psychological healthcare seems a step into the right direction for combatting gambling addiction as well but there is still work to be done.

12. Dialogue with the sector

203. For years the private sector has tried to contact the government to sit down around the table to share their experience in the sector, explain how some measures impact the sector and propose alternatives. This has often been refused by the government. This government currently seems to demonise the sector that they are supposed to regulate, up to the point where the Minister of Justice (competent for the games of chance) called them the "gambling mob"<sup>80</sup> whilst on the other hand seemingly listening to the requests of the National Lottery to restrict the private market in their favour.

204. It seems that due to this absence of (open) discussion, operators aren't left with many opportunities to oppose counterproductive, discriminatory, or sometimes illegal measures and must fight these battles before the different courts, leading to legal insecurity for the operators, the government, and the players. This way of working never lead to a, much wanted by all parties, coherent framework on gambling.

205. Dialogue between all concerned parties seems to be preferential to be able to establish this decent and coherent policy for player protection:

"However, we do not need an all-regulating body of legal texts. Rather, we should opt for partnerships with the gambling sector itself. To this end, a subtle balance should be sought between player protection,

<sup>77</sup> "A small percentage of respondents sought help from professionals to solve their gambling problem. their gambling problem (16.7%). When they did so (mainly before being excluded), lawyers and psychologists were the most popular. Those who sought clinical help were mainly advised to do so by someone close to them (86.9%)." <sup>80</sup> Tweet Vincent Van Quickenborne, 16 december 2022, <https://twitter.com/VincentVQ/status/1603786652018970625>

the economic importance of the sector, the employment associated with it and financial revenues for the various governments.” (own underlining)<sup>81</sup>

“All those involved in gambling - operators, players, punters, minors, those banned from gambling - must in turn be supported, protected, controlled or punished; they all form part of the same whole, which must be made cohesive, sustainable and mutually supportive, even though it is crisscrossed by interests that are both convergent and contradictory.”<sup>82</sup>

“The European Parliament [...] stresses that regulators and operators should closely cooperate with other stakeholders operating in the field of online gambling, e.g. gambling operators, regulators, consumer organisations, sports organisations, industry associations and the media, which share a joint responsibility for the integrity of online gambling and for informing consumers of the possible negative consequences of online gambling ” (own underlining)<sup>83</sup>

“Recognises that cooperation among Member States is essential but stresses that it is also very important that the expert group on gambling works in close collaboration with all stakeholders, including the gambling industry and consumer organisations.”<sup>84</sup>

206. A very recent example where the operators themselves were completely excluded are the discussion with the SARC (Culture, Youth, Sport and Media Strategic Advisory Board) on the impacts of the advertising ban (imposed only the private sector) for sports organisations.

There have been several discussions on this subject but one of these discussions is a bit peculiar. On the 16th of March were invited two people from the VAD (Flemish Expertise Centre for Alcohol and other Drugs), 5 people of the National Lottery including their CEO and person from the Belgian Gaming Commission but only in an individual capacity. No one from the private sector was present even though it concerns the private sector directly. If they wished to not include the sector in itself, the National Lottery shouldn't have been invited.

207. The above example shows how the government tries to avoid any sort of dialogue with the private legal sector, which is detrimental to player protection seeing as the private sector can provide useful insights into the application of certain measures on the terrain and even propose workable alternatives.

208. The private sector is not the only one being ignored by the government, however. Even the advice written out by their regulator for games of chance or even the privacy regulator are often ignored. Other bodies impacted by rules imposed aren't consulted either. When they ask why, the response from the Minister of Justice is that, due to the strong lobby, it wouldn't have been useful<sup>85</sup>:

“The lobby from the gaming sector is known to be one of the strongest lobbies, which is why I worked on this draft royal decree together with the other federal ministers responsible for gaming.

The arguments of the sports sector and the other sectors involved (such as media), which are often based on economic arguments, are well known to me. A prior consultation would have changed little about the measures to be taken in the fight against gambling addiction.”

209. Refusing to discuss legislative and regulatory proposals, without hearing from the concerned parties themselves (without obligation to agree with them), seems counterproductive leads to a lot of incomprehension from the impacted parties that feel they haven't been able to even put their (sometimes purely practical) arguments on the table, and leads inevitably to annulment proceedings.

210. As long as the government willingly ignores the different actors within the sector in its entirety and avoids any form of dialogue with them, the regulations might not be as efficient as they would like them to be. Nevertheless, such a dialogue would constitute an added value. No one is denying the problem of gambling addiction, every actor in the sector wants to try and find some solutions to this problematic. What's the harm in discussing some proposals together? There might be common ground to be found on which can be built.

13. Conclusion

211. While we praise the objective of player protection, in the light of the above and with the new restrictions we fear that the objective of canalisation will be severely impacted. There must be a way to find a good balance between restrictions, attractiveness of the legal offer, non-discriminatory measures, but this can only be achieved if the decisionmakers understand the sector in its entirety (legal and illegal, online and offline).

212. We have made some suggestions throughout the entire report that could improve player protection, on the one hand to make sure there is a level playing field with the illegal operators so that they do not get free reign in Belgium and on the other hand, to make sure there is a level playing field on the national level, guaranteeing the same level of protection for every player, regardless of what games he plays or by which operator the game is offered.

213. A dialogue between the sector and the decisionmakers needs to be put in to place, as well as additional sanction powers to the BGC, for who the combat against the illegal websites is a priority but lacks the power to combat them efficiently, and more collaboration from Belgian financial institutions and the telecom sector).

214. Notwithstanding all the above, both the private sector and the National Lottery are obviously more protective than the illegal sector. We a clear distinction for what is a legal website (as recommended by the European Parliament<sup>86</sup>), and which one is not - such as an integrated “seal of approval” that cannot simply be copied by an illegal website - and a clear distinction between the types of games would be a simple first step in the right direction.
